ABSTRACT

Sections 1 and 2 provide the background for classroom implementation of intergroup education and include a statement of beliefs, the State position on intergroup education, delineation of practical implementation, and required supportive services for this program. Sections 3-5 are intended for the guidance of the classroom teacher and include the overall guide objectives for the teacher and the student, the recurring themes in intergroup education, and an explanation of how the objectives and themes can be implemented. Sections 6 and 7 contain the teaching units for kindergarten and elementary grades, additional learning activities, and selected bibliographies for the instructional levels. Section 8 contains a selected bibliography for teacher reference. Each teaching unit contains learning objectives and activities and a list of materials and resources. Assessment tasks are listed for each instructional objective. Additional supportive activities are included for sections 6 and 7. (BE)

FOREWORD

The history books of the first half of our century pictured America as the great melting pot and a country that welcomed immigrants. Emma Lazarus said it for all of us in 1903 when she composed the famous lines for the base of the Statue of Liberty:

Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, the tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!

Lately, we have not been so sure. One ethnic group after another, some more loudly than others, assert the uniqueness of their own cultures and their reluctance to be "melted." At the same time the majority has come to a new awareness of the richness of these cultures and the need to preserve them. And with that we have come to recognize the need for understanding one another.

But to say that we need a program of intergroup education simply because ethnic minorities refuse to abandon their ancient cultures is to bowdlerize our recent history and to misstate the importance of this program to the public schools. We need intergroup education because deep resentment of long injustice has bred suspicion and contempt on all sides. Now passion needs instruction based on reason.

That is where our public schools enter the picture. Maryland's public schools now have the vital task of helping our students to understand and appreciate the nation's ethnic groups and the contributions that they have made to the development of the United States of America.

James C. Stevenson

PREFACE

The Maryland public schools support the principle that the school experience should develop responsible citizenship. Maryland educators support the position that education should prepare students to live in a pluralistic society founded upon democratic principles. Essential to this proposition is the necessity of providing equal educational opportunity regardless of race, sex, religion, ethnic background, or social class identification.

Since the Supreme Court Decision of 1954, Brown versus Board of Education, programs have been designed to promote intergroup education. However, we have not been overly successful in eliminating overt and covert forms of prejudicial actions toward minority groups. Even though we have laws that seek to fulfill the American Creed -- liberty and justice for all -- a continuing effort by the schools of Maryland to implement intergroup education is more essential today than ever before.

Accordingly, the Maryland State Department of Education, Division of Instruction, conducted three summer workshops in 1969, 1970, and 1971. The workshop in the summer of 1969 produced the basis for an instructional program for Maryland educators in a guide entitled, Intergroup Education in Maryland.

Since the attitudes of children and adolescents are still in the formative stage, the schools can assume a role of critical importance for developing positive attitudes. From this point of view, the schools of Maryland should be committed to the elimination of prejudice. The school curriculum must be altered to develop the broad understandings which pupils need to live in our changing society. This guide is an initial step toward integrating intergroup education into the total curriculum.

As a result of the report of the State Advisory Committee on Cultural and Ethnic Minorities, the Maryland State Board of Education adopted Bylaw 325, which calls for instructional programs in the schools that emphasize the teaching of ethnic and cultural minorities. The bylaw states:

All public schools shall include in their programs of studies... as a part of current curricular offerings... appropriate instruction for developing understanding and appreciation of Ethnic and Cultural Minorities.

During the summers of 1970, 1971, and 1972, three groups of teachers from local educational agencies worked to develop instructional activities that stress the contributions of ethnic and cultural minorities to our pluralistic society. The activities presented in New Perspectives in Intergroup Education are inter-disciplinary and range from early childhood through secondary education.

During the 1971-1972 school year, the instructional activities were piloted in the schools of Baltimore, Caroline, Dorchester, Frederick, Prince George's, and St. Mary's counties. On the basis of classroom usage, the instructional materials were rewritten in the summer of 1972 and the bibliographies enlarged as recommended by the teachers participating in the pilot programs.

Two summer workshops in 1973 and 1974 enabled teachers to enhance the program still further by developing units at four levels from K-12 around four recurring themes. This leadership program stresses the equal worth of individuals and ethnic groups and addresses the problems of prejudice and discrimination in American society. The four recurring themes which form the basis of the philosophical foundation for the program that defines cultural pluralism in Maryland and the nation are:

- Foundation for Equality: Equal Worth of Every Person
- Alliance for Equality: Equal Worth of Every Ethnic Group
- Barriers to Equality: Prejudice and Discrimination
- Action for Equality: Ideals and Realities

We believe that these materials will serve as viable guidelines for developing effective, dynamic programs of ethnic studies in the ongoing curricula of the schools in Maryland. Their use will help to reduce intergroup tensions and to lay the foundation for real equality and equal opportunity for every individual.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many individuals and agencies contributed time and talent toward the development of New Perspectives In Intergroup Education. Nevertheless, the responsibility for the inception and completion of this program has been the Maryland State Department of Education under Bylaw 325. James A. Addy, Consultant in Social Studies, and Mrs. Louella H. Woodward, Specialist in Curriculum, were the Project Coordinators. The Maryland State Department of Education extends its thanks and appreciation to the following persons and groups:

New Perspectives in Intergroup Education

SUGGESTED USAGE OF THE GUIDE

This guide has been prepared for use in developing effective programs in intergroup education and in integrating these programs into the ongoing curriculum. Educators at all levels should find it informative, helpful, and practical. As they use the guide, it is hoped that they will make the necessary adaptations which will insure appropriate instruction for developing an understanding and appreciation of all ethnic and cultural groups.

New Perspectives in Intergroup Education is not a new curriculum. Instead, many of the activities contained in the document have been used by classroom teachers throughout Maryland. The materials have been developed by teachers, piloted by teachers, and refined by teachers in order to present viable classroom experiences which will enhance the desired behavioral outcomes.

The organization of this guide follows the suggestions of teachers who were concerned that the organization of the document should facilitate classroom usage for teachers. Therefore, Sections I and II provide the background for classroom implementation of intergroup education. While the statement of beliefs is the philosophical foundation of the program, and the State position on intergroup education is included, practical implementation is delineated in the area of teacher preparation for intergroup education and the required supportive services for this program.

Sections III through V are intended for the guidance of the classroom teacher. These sections include the overall guide objectives for the teacher and the student, the recurring themes in intergroup education which undergird the units, and an explanation of how the objectives and themes can be implemented. In these sections, teachers will find the teaching units for the K-12 levels of instruction, as well as additional learning activities which can augment the teaching units.

The heart of the guide is found in Sections VI through VIII. In Sections VI and VII, teachers will find the teaching units for the K-12 levels of instruction, additional learning activities to augment the teaching units, and selected bibliographies for the instructional levels. Section VIII contains a selected bibliography for teacher reference.

The teaching units in Section VI and Section VII are designed as examples of the kinds of instructional units which can be developed and used to achieve the objectives of intergroup education. The learning activities included in the units are suggested for the exploration and mastery of the content and are for classroom use to provide learners with experiences that carry out the themes of intergroup education. Additional supportive activities are suggested to assist the learners in understanding and achieving the objectives. The teacher is encouraged to examine activities provided for levels other than the one he is teaching and to select those which may be appropriate for his group. In any case, it is anticipated that these units and additional activities will serve as guides and springboards for the development of other units and learning experiences in intergroup education throughout Maryland's schools.

The bibliographies in Sections VI, VII, and VIII are by no means exhaustive. However, all the materials listed in the bibliographies have been carefully reviewed and studied by the teachers who assisted in the development of the guide. Obviously, there are other print and nonprint resources that can be added. To assist in the evaluation and selection of ethnic studies materials, the Maryland State Department of Education published Guidelines for the Selection of Instructional Materials Which Will Insure Proper Recognition of Ethnic and Cultural Minorities. Hopefully, teachers and supervisors will use these guidelines as a basis for reviewing and selecting other supportive references as they become available.

TEACHER PREPARATION FOR INTERGROUP EDUCATION

The teacher is the key person in implementing a program of intergroup education. Every teacher has the responsibility to develop intergroup concepts in his teaching area. Many teachers have conducted activities which have aided in the development of democratic attitudes. Other teachers have had little experience with these techniques. Since all teachers are not trained to conduct programs of intergroup education, the importance of this program makes it necessary that systems assume the responsibility of training their teachers in this area of instruction.

Teacher attitudes and relationships with students are the most important ingredients for effective intergroup education. Only the teacher who truly believes in democratic precepts can be effective in reducing prejudices among his students. Among the most important personal prerequisites for an effective teacher of intergroup attitudes are:

- Agreement with the validity of the objectives and goals of intergroup education
- Strong personal commitment to the need and value of integrating intergroup education concepts in one's teaching activities
- Rapport with students which creates the environment for free discussion of feelings and emotions.

Preparation in the techniques of intergroup education is necessary in the teachers' training for effective intergroup education. Some of these techniques include the use of:

- Sociometric procedures
- Participation schedules
- Social distance scales and other measures of prejudice
- Role playing
- Projective techniques

- Student diaries
- Teacher logs of class procedures. *

To use these techniques of evaluation and interpret their findings requires training. In the State of Maryland there are a number of colleges and universities offering both summer and evening courses in the area of human relations. The federal government, private agencies, and local school systems offer a variety of institutes, workshops, and inservice programs in this area. Most of these courses offer college credit in addition to supplying the teacher with needed expertise in the field of intergroup relations.

Materials and Teacher Preparation

- Implementation of a school program in intergroup education requires special training and materials for teachers
- Student preparation for teaching must include techniques for developing and maintaining a school climate of open acceptance that dissolves barriers to communication
- Broad programs of intergroup inservice education and workshops must be provided, designed to produce understanding of human values and contributions. The program must provide for an intensive, realistic analysis of teachers' stereotyped ideas and rigid ways of thinking, and knowledge of the varying roles currently being played by dissent groups.
- Sufficient quantities of instructional materials selected according to the established criteria relating to intergroup education must be made available to teachers.

*Most of these are described in: Taba, Hilda; Brady, Elizabeth H.; Robinson, John T.; Vickery, William E., Diagnosing Human Relations Needs (Washington: American Council on Education, 1951) p. 155; Jennings, Helen H., Sociometry in Group Relations: A Manual for Teachers (Washington: American Council on Education, 1959) p. 105.

SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

Schools, however well staffed and well equipped, can do little toward developing strong, positive, responsive citizens without the sympathetic guidance and active support of administrators and civic leaders. Such people must:

- . Provide and participate in groups actively studying human relations and multi-ethnic contributions
- . Provide and use extensive libraries devoted to multi-ethnic social concerns and personal values and experiences
- . Publicly support the school's programs in intergroup education
- . Encourage and expedite exchange between the school and the community through classroom visitors and field trips to the workday world
- . Place school personnel on the basis of talent and need (rather than on ethnic background)
- . Encourage and expedite exchange between the school and legislators and public administrators
- . Encourage and expedite the interaction of schools with public and private agencies working in the fields of social concern and mental health.

The teacher needs the support of the community, boards of education, school administrators, and supervisors in working with ethnic and cultural minorities. Intergroup education represents total commitment by the educational hierarchy.

STATE

As representatives of the citizenry in Maryland, members of the State Board of Education determine and establish policy for the educational system. If they are to perform their duties objectively and fairly, they must be sensitive to the educational needs of all the children of all the people. Accordingly:

- . Official policies and guidelines established by the State Board of Education will give intergroup education its rightful place in the curriculum of the school
- . Further commitment of the State Board will be illustrated by the positive actions of its staff in the State Department of Education in terms of implementation of these policies and guidelines.

LOCAL

Local Boards of Education operating within the framework established by the State Board of Education should provide programs to accomplish the following:

- Employment of local administrators who support the state's position on intergroup, education as a part of the total program
- Promotion of planned activities which result in community support for intergroup education
- Employment only of those teachers who are willing to work in programs actively promoting intergroup education
- Provision of adequate funds for appropriate instructional materials, inservice training programs, facilities, and personnel in the area of intergroup education
- Immediate development and implementation of integration of both faculty and pupils at the local level.

Administrators

STATE

Incentives which encourage members of the profession in the State to take advantage of inservice training programs in intergroup education should be established to expedite the retraining of personnel. These incentives may include credit toward an advanced degree, reimbursement of expenses, or professional recognition.

Recognizing that state administrators are not only responsible for professional inservice training but also for promoting parental and community understanding of intergroup education, programs of dynamic perspective should be developed to seek the active cooperation of private and governmental agencies at the local, state, and national levels.

LOCAL

The superintendent serves as the executive officer of the local board and as the educational leader of the public school community. Through his leadership and the assistance of his professional staff, intergroup education will become an integral part of the total educational program and the business operation of the system. Personnel hiring, placement, and promotion are strategic areas which may reflect the degree of commitment to the concept of equality of all people.

The principal's creativity and initiative as well as technical skill can be demonstrated by programs which aid in the growth of intergroup relationships. To do this he must:

- . Provide time and programs for the teacher to familiarize himself with the individual student and the community
- . Provide learning opportunities in ethnic and cultural relations for parents and other adults
- . Provide leadership in a continuing analysis of curriculum problems and needs related to all pupils
- . Demonstrate objectivity toward personnel, pupils, and the community.

Supervisors

STATE

The educator of today no longer regards supervision in the narrow concept of confinement to visiting teachers, supplying materials, and rating the staff. Supervision is now recognized as being intimately concerned with inservice growth of quality professional personnel. In view of this role, the State supervisors should:

- . Emphasize the need for local programs of intergroup education
- . Emphaize a cooperative and democratic attitude in meetings and related activities
- . Actively participate in the development of standards and guidelines for programs and materials of instruction.

LOCAL

The local supervisors must support the position of the State Department and render supportive services needed by the teacher in implementing a program of intergroup education by:

- . Establishing workshops that develop programs of intergroup education
- . Developing curriculum guides with teachers emphasizing the cultural plurality of our society
- . Cooperating with and using community agencies that are supportive of intergroup education.

Community

Schools within communities need to become aware of the necessity for many patterns of operations in working with organized groups. The wide variety and types of organizations found in different communities make community-school cooperation mandatory. Many communities have agencies with professional staffs who can serve as resource personnel in developing programs of intergroup education. The community can improve intergroup relations by providing a receptive attitude toward communication between the school and community in working for better intergroup relations. The school should be encouraged to use community problems as an integral part of the school's curricula by:

- . Accepting the merits of a program of intergroup relations
- . Stimulating parents to take greater interest in the programs and goals of the schools for their children
- . Helping members of the community to recognize the value of the utilization of school-based and community services.

S E C T I O N I I
STATEMENT OF BELIEFS

The Advisory Committee on Ethnic and Cultural Minorities appointed by the State Superintendent of Schools, Dr. James A. Sensenbaur, developed the following Statement of Beliefs to serve as a philosophic basis for the establishment of a program of intergroup education in the schools of Maryland:

America must be philosophically committed to cultural plurality as a significant value in our traditional way of life. Yet a philosophical commitment to our stated constitutional and legislated ideals is not good enough. Such a commitment in theory must necessarily be accompanied by an even greater commitment in practice lest our hallowed creed of "liberty and justice for all" might become only a hollow sham. There is, as yet, no real unity within the diversity which our many cultural and ethnic groups represent. Instead, minorities still excluded from the mainstream of American society are striving to establish an identification and a feeling of pride in their own heritage. Simultaneously they are becoming increasingly more insistent on full-scale participation on equal terms in the ordinary affairs of American life. Prejudice and discrimination against out-groups continue their devastation as barriers to human fulfillment. "Man's inhumanity to man" still abounds.

Our society will not survive unless it can adapt to change. Nor can any element in our society hope to survive alone. Therefore, it is imperative that the schools recognize and accept their responsibility as potent agents for social change. Schools must first be dedicated to open inquiry and must create an atmosphere for learning which is devoid of all prejudice and discrimination. Knowledge of the complex causes and consequences of prejudice and discrimination must supplant existing myths and misconceptions. The changing of negative attitudes becomes a means for reducing prejudice, discrimination, and intergroup conflict. It is crucial for all people of all ethnic and cultural groups to develop their full human potential and to become free participants in American society.

Since intergroup relations permeate all areas of living, the total program of each school must endeavor to develop empathy and sensitivity to human values. Any study of "man as a human being" must be predicated upon a belief in the fundamental dignity and worth of every individual and upon an understanding of our common origin. Curriculum provisions must be made at all levels and through all disciplines (including the sciences and the humanities) for satisfactory experiences in working with and learning about people of all ethnic and cultural groups.

Within this broad curriculum framework for intergroup education, the social studies must exercise a vital leadership role. Students need to analyze today's current problems and their possible solutions. Teachers must present the material in a realistic, objective manner without any attempt at distortion and/or omission. Emphasis should be placed on the pattern of participation of all ethnic and cultural groups and not primarily on the contribution of individuals whose ethnic identity may have been irrelevant to their achievement. In most cases, this should be done as an integral part of the social studies rather than as a separate but parallel course. Whenever specific situations and circumstances warrant, selective electives may need to be initiated.

In today's schools, any effective approach to teaching and the understanding of world peoples must begin with an intensive, realistic analysis of teachers' stereotypic ideas and rigid ways of thinking. Teachers must be closely attuned to the changing character of society and must learn to "think anew" and "act anew." Teachers must be fully knowledgeable about the varying roles currently being played by dissident groups; likewise, they must clearly perceive the constructive impact of dissent. In short, they must become staunch believers in the potential strength to be derived from divergent ethnic and cultural groups in American society. Teachers must also become deeply aware of their own feelings and master the skill of feeling what others feel. They must understand all children, empathize with their ambitions, and accept their various behavior patterns. Such teachers will seldom emerge by sheer accident. On the contrary, it is crucially important that they receive careful preparation in comprehensive, well coordinated programs of both preservice and inservice education. To expedite these programs, the State Department of Education must take the decisive lead in providing rich learning opportunities for teachers to acquire new insights, extend and expand their knowledge and appreciation of others; eliminate their own strong prejudgments and generalizations about minorities; increase their sensitivity to other people; and develop new strategies for creating a viable climate in which a change of attitudes, feelings, and understandings is entirely possible.

To accomplish these goals, teachers must have sufficient supplies of suitable instructional materials. Publishing companies must be kept apprised of current, pressing needs and must redouble their efforts to meet these demands. Here, too, the State Department of Education must assume an active leadership role in the preparation of guidelines for the selection of appropriate materials. In every instance, materials should always be sought which "will enlighten -- not enslave; clarify -- not obscure." At the present juncture, the problems and opportunities of the Afro-American group demand urgent attention. Therefore, teaching should be focused on the study of the Afro-American cultural group both in historical and contemporary contexts.

The importance of environment in developing attitudes is also recognized. The State Department of Education must, therefore, provide learning opportunities in ethnic and cultural relations for parents and other adults.

Schools must enlist the cooperation of private and governmental agencies at the local, state, and national levels if the way is to be found to value and utilize cultural differences within a framework of political and economic unity. Progress toward this goal can be realized only with the cooperation and full support of local boards of education, superintendents, and their total administrative -- supervisory staffs. Wise and creative leaders must constantly utilize new strategies which are effective in specific situations. They must strive to build even more effective programs on intellectual, attitudinal, and action levels for the reduction of prejudice and discrimination and for the ultimate prevention of societal decay. Thus, the coordinated thrust of all agencies will assist in transforming our democratic profession for equality into a reality.

POSITION ON INTERGROUP EDUCATION

Today's children must be educated to live effectively in a multicultural society. To accomplish this necessary objective, it is imperative that we correct the shortcomings in our present educational offerings. We must no longer tolerate, by distortion and/or omission, the disregard in our curricula and instructional materials for the history and contributions of cultural and ethnic minorities. Instead, we must alter our curricula to give pupils the broader understanding they need to live and work successfully in multi-group situations. We must deal adequately and realistically with the background and nature of the current struggle for justice and equality of opportunity. We must insure in all our classrooms the use of instructional materials which objectively reflect the cultural and ethnic diversity of American life and of our world.

We believe we can best overcome our present weaknesses through a planned program of intergroup education designed to permeate every area of the curriculum from kindergarten through elementary and secondary levels. Such a program will not only recognize the contribution of cultural and ethnic minorities in the building of a democratic republic, but it will also attempt to change attitudes, eliminate prejudice, and re-educate teachers. Specifically, a total program of intergroup education would envision:

- An integrated curriculum from early childhood through the twelfth grade with special emphasis in the social studies area
- Integration of Afro-American and minority group content in the American history curriculum wherever appropriate rather than the introduction of separate supplemental units which would provide merely peripheral treatment
- Provision for a separate elective course in Afro-American or minority group history where local needs warrant, but with the full knowledge that it will not fulfill the intent of the mandate which was designed to give all students a broader knowledge and understanding of various cultures other than their own

Guidelines for the selection of educational materials which emphasize minority group contributions to the growth of the American nation

- Elimination of misunderstandings, animosity, and the reduction of prejudice in all the schools
- Certification of teachers who have had college level courses dealing with minorities in America
- Retraining of teachers through workshops which emphasize positive attitudinal and behavioral changes
- Support of the program and cooperation in its implementation by all administrative and supervisory personnel on both the state and local levels
- Coordination of all agencies and instruments of our society in designing, implementing, evaluating, and modifying, where necessary, a program of intergroup education in all Maryland public school systems.

Reduction of Prejudice

Minority group and ethnic prejudices are multiple -- determined and perpetuated by a complex interaction of social and psychological factors. The alleviation of such prejudices requires a variety of approaches in education.

The basis of any program designed to reduce minority group and ethnic hostilities is the dissolution of barriers which prevent contacts between members of various ethnic and racial groups. It is incumbent upon educational units to reduce group hostility by working for and supporting educational opportunities which afford optimum conditions for student interaction in groups and on an individual basis.

Physical proximity is a necessary condition for the reduction of prejudice. However, it can only be considered one step in the process of reducing prejudice. School desegregation must be viewed as essential to developing positive attitudes between members of racial groups.

Formal programs of intergroup education provide a vehicle for individuals to develop attitudes about members of cultural and ethnic groups. Movies, plays, novels, and textbooks permit students to obtain information, to have vicarious experiences, and to identify with members of minority groups. Information about minority groups may modify many misconceptions which individuals have about minorities. However, the acquisition of facts and information about minority groups does not promote intergroup education.

The purpose of acquiring information about groups and the manner in which it is acquired will determine the effectiveness of educational programs in changing attitudes. Educational programs which allow members of bi-racial or multi-ethnic groups to engage in community study-action activities involving field trips, area surveys, work experiences in social agencies, and community programs provide opportunities for the development of positive attitudes and the reduction of group hostilities. These approaches contain the key elements of physical proximity, equal status participation, and the pursuit of common goals. Information regarding minority groups and the consequences of prejudice gathered through community study and action activities can reduce prejudice.

Attitude change may also be effected through participation in small groups. Discussion, socio-drama, and role playing permit group members to gain insights into the dynamics of prejudice and empathy for the victims of prejudice. Participation assumes that members of such groups have personality structures which are amenable to positive change and that they have made preliminary commitments to change.

Any effective improvement in cultural or ethnic relations depends upon school programs which focus on the development of positive attitudes rather than the remediation of negative attitudes. The heart of such a program is the concept of ethnic and cultural pluralism. This concept recognizes that differences must be accepted and recognized, not eliminated. A conscious attempt to homogenize cultures and people implies that people and cultures are not equal, but rather that a culture or value system of one person is superior to another. This latter type of thinking is neither positive nor acceptable.

It is imperative that the public educational system be recognized as the focus for changing attitudes. The public school offers the greatest opportunity for changing attitudes and is a positive intervening agent in the life of an individual. The public school with its commitment to the ideals of American democracy has an established historical and philosophical precedent for developing positive intergroup relations.

However, as Gordon Allport points out, the school can exert a negative as well as a positive influence on students' attitudes.

The atmosphere that surrounds the child at school is exceedingly important. If segregation of the sexes or races prevails, if authoritarianism and hierarchy dominate the system, the child cannot help but learn that power and status are the dominant factors in human relationships. If, on the other hand, the school system is democratic, if the teacher and child are respected units, the lesson of respect for the person will easily register.

Proceeding logically from this foundation, pupils in Maryland schools should, thereby, acquire a better understanding of their national heritage. Teachers should then be able to develop a more enlightened understanding of the peoples of the world.

S E C T I O N I I I
OBJECTIVES FOR INTERGROUP EDUCATION

As the position on intergroup education is translated into experience in the schools, it is helpful to pinpoint some overall objectives for the student as a result of the experience and some objectives to guide the teacher in making the experience possible for the students.

At every stage of the student's progress from kindergarten through the twelfth grade, the teacher needs to build into every class relationship the objectives for the teacher -- only thus can intergroup education result in the attitudes of acceptance and commitment that are desired for the student.

As the student grows up, he is able to attain more of the objectives, and at a more sophisticated level of understanding and commitment. The objectives for the student represent the final outcome for the responsible young adult of 13 years of intergroup education. Only as teachers at every level teach to achieve these objectives will the desired outcomes be assured.

OBJECTIVES FOR THE TEACHER

The teacher will be responsible for:

- Analyzing his biases and for taking the necessary steps to modify them.
- Creating a climate of acceptance and mutual respect which allows for free expression of ideas and feelings.
- Helping students to build positive attitudes toward themselves and others.
- Providing experiences that will help students develop a sensitivity to the needs and feelings of others.
- Creating a learning environment conducive to understanding and valuing all cultural groups.
- Providing a total teaching program based on the dignity and worth of the individual.
- Using procedures that are fair, just, and realistic in all group situations.
- Using a multi-dimensional approach to attitude change; for example: contact with various ethnic groups, literature, direct study, role playing, play therapy, audiovisual materials.
- Helping students to identify real power sources in their community and to develop skills which facilitate constructive social action related to intergroup problems.
- Utilizing the findings of recent research in intergroup education and experimenting with new ways of building desirable attitudes.
- Demonstrating a commitment to a society in which the economic, political, and social rights of individuals and groups are free from exploitation by power groups.

OBJECTIVES FOR THE STUDENT

The student will:

- Respect himself and every human being as an individual of equal worth.
- Evaluate the effects of his personal behavior in terms of its impact on the human rights of others.
- Express ideas and opinions which are free from labels and stereotypes.
- Use information to identify continuing problems of human relations in a pluralistic society.
- Seek possible solutions to persistent human rights problems and make responsible decisions concerning them.
- Become directly involved in the prevention and remediation of problems dealing with the equal rights of individuals: education, employment, housing, public accommodations, and equal protection under the law.
- Support constructive social change and accept majority decisions, while respecting the rights of minorities.
- Accept every person on the basis of his individual worth, rather than his race, religion, nationality, or socio-economic status.
- Accept the fact that individuals and groups have the right to differ from one another and that differences do not denote inferiority or superiority.
- Develop a sensitivity to the needs, emotions, and problems of all people.

In teaching toward these objectives, it is essential that teachers keep in mind the themes that should pervade the intergroup experience.

S E C T I O N I V

RECURRING THEMES IN INTERGROUP EDUCATION

In the experience of human beings, we have advanced from isolation to pluralism. In the past, many people lived in isolated groups and considered people of other groups as less human than themselves. There are many examples from history of the refusal to treat members of out-groups with the same consideration as members of the in-group.

But all human beings, of whatever race, religion, language, or nation, share the same human needs and aspirations. These needs and hopes are met in different ways in different cultures. Each culture has its own set of patterns for life and must be recognized as a system valued in its own right.

In the United States there are many ethnic groups, the result of different cultural and racial heritages.

Every person in this country belongs to an ethnic group, and our many cultural heritages enrich our pluralistic society.

Within our democratic system, instead of a monocultural society, we can achieve UNITY THROUGH DIVERSITY.

Below are presented the four major recurring themes with supporting statements which should pervade inter-group education in every classroom from kindergarten through senior high school:

I. FOUNDATION FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY PERSON

- A. Every person needs to have a positive self-image.
- B. Every person should be respected equally as unique, having values and goals that are his own.
- C. Every person wants to be seen as an individual, not as representative of a type.
Even though we need to study cultural differences and become aware of cultural sensitivities, we must treat each person as an individual.
- D. Every human being has the same basic needs. The basic needs are:
The need for physical health and comfort;
The need for security and safety;
The need for a feeling of belonging, for love;

The need for accomplishment, for using abilities to achieve goals;
The need for recognition and esteem, for a sense of adequacy and self-respect.

II. ALLIANCE FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY ETHNIC GROUP

- A. An ethnic group is a group of people who differ from other groups of people in the United States in race, religion, or cultural background. Every person in this country is a member of an ethnic group.

Ethnic groups in America include: American Indians of many different heritages; blacks, racially of African heritage; Europeans of Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish heritage; Spanish-Americans from many countries in Central and South America; and Orientals from many Eastern countries.

- B. The cultural background of a group of people is the totality of the learned attitudes and activities that the people in the group share.

Each culture has its own system of values as well as of behavior patterns.

- C. The cultural background of each ethnic group must be studied in depth in order to be understood.

The history of each racial and cultural group must be studied thoroughly.

The aim is to understand the heritage of each ethnic group without judging it by the values of another group.

- D. For each person within an ethnic group, his cultural background is what he knows best.

Students need to know and affirm their own cultural heritage without feeling that they must impose their cultural values on other people.

- E. We are enriched by understanding cultural backgrounds other than our own.

Students need to be aware of the sensibilities of other people in ethnic groups and catch the excitement found in exploring the different life-ways of other people.

- F. Linguistic differences need not be barriers to understanding.

Students should be encouraged to learn the standard English of their geographical region while retaining their home dialect. No dialect should be disparaged -- it is an advantage to be bi-dialectal.

Non-English-speaking students who speak other languages should be encouraged to become fully bilingual in English and their own language without disparagement of their foreign accent.

G. Cultural differences are reflected in non-verbal patterns of behavior.

We need to be aware of the variations in gesture, posture, and gait of different cultural groups in order to further understand people of different ethnic backgrounds.

H. We have a "cultural mosaic" in the United States, not a "melting pot."

Rather than a remodeling of all cultural groups after one Western European model, we have a multiplicity of cultural groups living side by side in a mosaic.

III. BARRIERS TO EQUALITY: PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION

A. Every person is prejudiced.

As teachers we need to become increasingly aware of our own prejudices, especially racial prejudices, and try to overcome them.

We need to help students at all levels to explore their own prejudices and seek the facts and attitudes that will destroy prejudice.

Disparaging labels applied to groups of people are symptoms of prejudice based on fear, not on facts.

Prejudice must be studied in historical perspective to see how it has developed and how it has been used for economic advantage.

B. Prejudice exists not only between groups of different races, religions, and national origins, but also between groups divided by geographic location, age, and socio-economic status.

We need to recognize that prejudiced attitudes poison relations between whites and blacks, rural and urban dwellers, older people and younger people, and between people of higher and lower socio-economic positions.

C. Institutionalized prejudice can be even more insidious and damaging than personal prejudice.

When by law or by common agreement groups of people because of race, religion, or national origin are exploited, institutionalized prejudice is operating.

Teachers need to help students see that in jobs, housing, clubs, schooling, and voting, blacks and other groups are not given free choices. And we need to show students how to work to eliminate discrimination.

D. Discrimination takes many forms.

From the reluctance to touch a child of another race, through segregating children in the classroom, to housing covenants that restrict free choice, and limitation of job opportunities, discrimination denies the basic human rights and needs of minority groups.

The teacher must be a model of fair behavior that reflects a positive attitude toward all groups and the commitment to eliminate discrimination. Thus he can help students to develop healthier attitudes and commitments to fairness.

E. Discrimination results in false myths and images.

The white who thinks of blacks as lazy, stupid, or irresponsible is basing his ideas on false myths rather than on the truth. Where whites see all blacks as appropriate only in menial jobs, and blacks see whites as racists, false images block the paths to realistic understanding and relationships.

Teachers must help students to recognize the words and phrases that represent labeling in terms of stereotypes, counter the false myths and images with facts, and encourage students to see all human beings as persons like themselves, unique while basically alike, and deeply hurt by stereotypes.

F. Hypersensitivity, a result of discrimination, makes understanding difficult.

Teachers must help students to realize that people who have been hurt by discrimination are hypersensitive in cross-ethnic situations. It will take a great deal of patience and understanding as well as good will to build relationships of trust and cooperation.

G. People laugh at what is strange to them because of embarrassment and fear.

The unfamiliar is embarrassing because it is confusing. The new engenders fear because it is unknown.

Students can be led to examine their reactions of laughter at the strange. The understanding teacher can help students to realize that what is strange for members of one cultural group is familiar for members of another. If students can "stand in the shoes" of people of various ethnic backgrounds, they are enriched personally and equipped to act to promote intergroup equality and cooperation.

IV. ACTION FOR EQUALITY: IDEALS AND REALITIES

A. Prejudice can be *un*learned; *un*prejudice can be taught.

All of the prejudiced attitudes, action, and epithets are learned responses, not instinctive or natural. Children do not naturally have prejudice, but can easily be taught prejudice.

Children can also be taught *un*prejudice, based on their natural sense of fairness and their awareness of their own feelings which can be extended to empathy for others.

B. Implementation of rights guaranteed by the Constitution is the ground for solutions.

The right of every person to be treated with justice and respect for his humanity must be recognized and practiced in the classroom.

Teachers can help students to understand the rights guaranteed by the Constitution and to explore the methods available in our democratic society for insuring that these rights are not denied to anyone.

C. Freedom and equality under law require responsibility and vigilance.

In the classroom students can practice the responsible attitudes and actions that make real freedom possible.

Teachers can help students to be aware of inequality in our society and to gain the skills they need to eradicate inequality in opportunities - economically and socially.

D. The Constitution provides for government by the consent of the governed who need to know the political skills for getting their needs met.

Since 18-year-olds now have the right to vote, it is imperative that in the public schools the issues of democracy, equality, and power be made clear, and the processes available by law for responsible pressures for change in humane directions be mastered.

E. The ideals of democracy include the solutions to intergroup problems and opportunities for constructive change.

Teachers can help students to see the gap between the ideals of our democracy and the realities of unequal distribution of power. They can guide students in discovering the means to direct change toward achievement of the ideals: the fulfillment of the American dream: freedom, justice, and equality for all.

The attitudes and approaches that are expressed in the themes must permeate the classroom and the extra-classroom experiences of every student. If the teacher treats all students as persons of worth, encouraging them to find and develop their talents and strengths in language, mathematics, social studies, science, physical education, arts, and crafts, the foundation is laid for equal valuing and opportunity for every individual.

In shops and gymnasiums, as well as in classrooms and assemblies, the theme of the contributions of many ethnic groups and of individuals from these groups can be emphasized. Thus students learn to value the pluralism that America enjoys.

Again, in every classroom opportunities occur not only for using the learning experiences provided in the next sections, but also for bringing out an awareness of prejudice and discrimination and for exploring ways of combating prejudice and discrimination. As Dr. Jean Grambs points out in Intergroup Education, the teacher needs to be sensitive to the "teachable moments," which may occur at any time in any situation at every level, when attitude changes can be most effectively produced.

It is especially in social studies classrooms that the governmental processes for enhancing and protecting equality are studied. But in every classroom, the attitudes that lead to a commitment to full social equality must be fostered.

S E C T I O N V

IMPLEMENTATION OF OBJECTIVES AND THEMES

Rights have life and meaning only in behavior. Strong support and defense of the American dream can lead society to survival and maturation in the changing world. Inner strength, born of a sense of personal worth and nourished by pride in ability and accomplishment can be the product of this support and defense.

Change has become essential for our survival as a democratic nation. The school has a vital role to assume in bringing about change. An atmosphere for learning devoid of prejudice and discrimination is imperative for positive change. A school or individual not adaptable to change is handicapped. The Educational Policies Commission states that the successful school can cope with this type of handicap on three fronts:

- Demonstration to students of a close relationship between school and life
- Inclusion of the remedial services necessary for progress
- Development of aspirations which constructively alter the course of young lives.<sup>1</sup>

School Programs

School programs that, through bias or ignorance, deny or diminish a student's opportunity for personal growth and worthy achievement have failed in their purpose. The school influence must:

- Help students to develop positive self-concepts
- Help students of minority groups to develop a positive group concept
- Help students to recognize and accept the benefits of cultural pluralism

<sup>1</sup>Educational Policies Commission, Education and the Disadvantaged American, (Washington, D.C., National Education Association, 1962), pp. 15-16.

- Help students to develop skills in group and interpersonal relations
- Help students to be alert and sensitive to the pressing issues of today's society
- Help students to acquire the skills and understandings necessary for effective endeavor.

Four chief ways in which the school influence may be exercised to develop intergroup understandings are: through formal study, through informal guidance, through techniques and activities, and through school-community life.

Through Formal Study:

- Demonstrate and analyze the participation of all major ethnic, cultural, and economic groups in modifying the environment and in establishing codes of behavior
- Consider the contributions of individuals of varying backgrounds to past and present society
- Examine the artistic and literary expressions related to the experiences of various groups
- Examine the backgrounds and possible outcomes of current social issues.

As a result of this, students should be able to:

- Identify and describe the contribution of more than one ethnic or cultural group in discussing an event in history
- Identify and describe several different ethnic sources treating a common literary or artistic theme
- Identify and describe the contributions of several leading representatives of different ethnic groups.

Through Informal or Incidental Guidance:

School personnel must become involved in actions that allow them to develop positive attitudes in areas such as the following:

- Sensitivity to student needs, concerns, and aspirations
- Awareness of the burning issues of contemporary society
- Sensitivity to the implications and opportunities for positive learning provided by student responses and actions

- Respect for and acceptance of individual differences of students and others
- Awareness of the influence of encouragement on the development of self
- Commitment to the concern for others as an example of student learning experiences
- Reservation of judgment about the motives and behavior of others
- Avoidance of arbitrary application of rules
- Recognition of bias in themselves and others.

Through Techniques and Activities:

School personnel must learn to employ techniques and activities which result in an atmosphere conducive to the following:

- Awareness of the conscious and unconscious causes of human behavior
- Reduction of stereotyped thinking
- Deeper regard for self and others
- Techniques of action and interaction that are problem solving.

As a result of this, students should be able to:

- Identify and order the probable motivating forces in a given human situation
- Make decisions in everyday life which are based on an evaluation and selection of possible effects
- Effectively use time in independent work situations
- Identify ways in which people differ and relate these to the ways in which people resolve their needs and reorder their feelings
- Seek help in clarifying their own problems.

Through School-Community Life:

The school is an institution of society. Life in the school should reflect practices that make for a good community. The classroom atmosphere should provide an opportunity for students to practice democratic interpersonal relationships and other social skills essential to good community life. There should be patterns of association among the students that provide for the following types of experiences:

- Opportunities for practicing fair play
- Opportunities for leadership and fellowship
- Developing pride and a sense of belonging to the group
- Opportunities for children of all groups to understand and appreciate one another as representative individuals
- Opportunities to develop a sense of adequacy by all students.

In order to achieve these objectives, the following suggestions will be helpful:

- Teachers should show courtesy toward the students
- Students should show courtesy toward each other
- Classes should develop behavior codes
- Students should keep records of their own progress
- Class-developed goals should be developed through teacher-student planning.

There should be:

- Person-to-person contact: Actual association and activity with others
- Community study and utilization for classroom projects
- Inter-school visits with different cultural groups
- Frank and open school discussion of school problems and successes.

Classroom activities could be:

- Role playing or socio-drama

- Viewing and discussing films
- Writing, witnessing, and performing in relevant dramatics
- Reading, writing, or discussing literature concerning intercultural relations
- Listening to or performing music from various cultures
- Participating in or observing dances and games of other countries.

Activities for outside the classroom could be:

- Beautifying the school environment
- Developing a school newspaper
- Organizing a school library shelf on intergroup relations
- Preparing a showcase display using objects that portray intergroup education
- Presenting fashion shows with an international motif
- Portraying folk dances of other lands and cultures
- Role playing by students.

A broad view of responsibility and citizenship can be experienced through school activities such as:

- Assembly programs
- Glee clubs and bands
- Safety patrol
- School newspaper
- Student council
- School canteen
- School store
- Service campaigns.

The measure of individual growth should be observed in student initiative to participate in community affairs such as:

- . Recreation center activities
- . Theatre groups
- . Community concerns and shows
- . Homemakers' clubs
- . Community improvement clubs
- . Baby sitting services
- . Tutoring service
- . Voter aid groups.
- . Volunteer service programs in:
  - . Hospitals
  - . Headstart programs
  - . Orphanages
  - . Nursing homes.

SECTION VI

Level I - Teaching Units for Early Childhood

(Includes Supportive Learning
Activities and Selected Bibliography)

GENERAL INTRODUCTION TO TEACHING UNITS (K-12)

New Perspectives in Intergroup Education is presented in teaching units developed at four levels around four themes. Levels I and II appear in Volume I; Levels III and IV appear in Volume II.

The four themes provide the focus for the instructional objectives in each unit; the four levels provide the basis for the content, materials, types of learning activities, and assessment tasks. Each objective is followed by appropriate level content, learning activities, resource materials, and an assessment that will indicate mastery of the instructional objective by the learner.

Clearly, there will be some overlapping, but each objective relates directly to the theme and each component under an objective relates directly to that objective.

Level divisions move from the basic rudiments, Level I, of a theme to the more sophisticated and complicated elements in Level IV. Since teachers have a broad range of learners, the level divisions serve as a guide for the beginning of instruction. Assessment tasks will assist the teacher in determining the readiness of the learner for different levels. No one theme or level is mutually exclusive.

The theme and level divisions were designed to provide flexibility for the teacher in selecting appropriate level objectives for use with a selected group of learners.

Appropriateness was the single most important criterion on which the teaching units were designed. All elements of each unit were carefully screened and piloted to assure their appropriateness for each level.

Although the teaching units represent classroom piloted activities designed with carefully selected, available materials, new materials are continually being produced and published. Teachers should review new materials as they relate to a given instructional objective.

Teachers should compare their needs with the instructional objective and its content. The units are compatible with a broad range of subject matter areas. In fact, teachers in every discipline will find content which can be integrated into their ongoing classroom curriculum.

For example, if an elementary music lesson is primarily dealing with rhythm, the teacher can include ethnic dances to expand the perspective of the lesson. A biology lesson can have the added dimension of helping the learner accept every person as a human being and gain a positive self-image. The contributions of different ethnic groups to the development of mathematics add dimension to the study of that discipline.

Teachers should first select appropriate instructional objectives to which they can adapt the resources and learning activities. Next, they should select appropriate content, and, if necessary, modify the learning activities to reflect their needs.

Hopefully, these units will provide the beginnings for New Perspectives in Intergroup Education.

RATIONALE FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD UNITS

Changes in social attitudes in our American culture demand changes in our educational philosophy of teaching.

Educators of the very young child realize that early childhood is a critical period in the development of the social being that a child will become. They also recognize that many young children begin school with preconceived misconceptions (prejudices) concerning different ethnic groups. Research has shown that adult prejudices can appear at a very early age in children.* Therefore, it becomes necessary to insure that the very young child begins to develop an awareness of the pluralistic society in which he lives and to acquire positive attitudes toward all ethnic groups.

The overall purpose of this curriculum is to provide the teacher of young children with activities and resources which can be used to enable each child to be actively involved in building positive social attitudes in intergroup relations. The curriculum is success-oriented, geared to the strengths of each child.

Four themes permeate the curriculum with emphasis in the first theme on the developmental process of the child. Prime consideration has been given to the importance of the child's self-image, as well as to his interactions with people, places, and things in his immediate environment.

Theme two introduces the child to the discovery of people, places, and things on a wider scale involving ethnic groups. The objectives cover life-styles, ethnic personalities, languages, ethnic games and foods, and cultural heritage.

*King, Edith W. and August Kerber. The Sociology of Early Childhood Education. American Book Company, 1968, p.65.

Theme three focuses on a more abstract level of development dealing with barriers to equality. Here the child participates in activities pertaining to identifying forms of discrimination, maintaining individuality, reacting to situations, identifying positive qualities, and evaluating accusations.

The fourth theme, "Ideals and Realities," provides an opportunity for the child to learn the importance of conforming to rules and standards, developing sensitivity, identifying rights and assuming responsibilities, and resolving inequalities.

Young children are usually able to absorb far more knowledge and exhibit a wider range of interest than many parents and teachers recognize. The young child's desire to learn about a more socialized environment should be capitalized upon and incorporated into the curriculum for Early Childhood Education. Based on the premise that a curriculum should encompass the learning modalities for which educators must assume responsibility, the suggested activities for level I are as selective as possible. They are designed to provide experiences using an inter-disciplinary approach which will promote an in-depth understanding of ethnicity.

TEACHING UNITS FOR FOUR THEMES

LEVEL I -- THEME I: FOUNDATIONS FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY PERSON

25

Instructional Objective 1: Given a variety of sensory stimuli, the learner will be able to identify and describe his physical features and his body structure.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
Sensory perceptions and physical factors affect one's self-image.			Use a variety of sensory experiences through which each learner will be given opportunities to identify and describe his physical features and his body structure.
I. Sensory perceptions			Suggested experiences:
A. Seeing	I, A. Take an individual picture of each child in the class. Then allow each child to mount his picture for a bulletin board display entitled, "Everyone Is Beautiful in His Own Way" or "Look at Me."	Child's Introduction to the Human Body . 257 Park Avenue, South, New York, New York 10010: John Day Co., 1961.	1. Use photographs for identification of body parts and features.
B. Touching	I, A. Have the class discover the children who can be grouped according to the following: height, color of hair, color of eyes, size of feet, size of hands.	Aiki, My Five Senses . Route 9W, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1962.	2. Use physical education equipment to develop gross motor skills.
C. Hearing	I, A. Choose a partner to walk with to experience the feeling of blindness. One child will close his eyes or wear a blindfold. Reverse partners.		3. Use small group cooking activities to develop sensory perceptions.
D. Smelling	I, A. Invite a blind person to visit the classroom to demonstrate the senses used to compensate for blindness.	How We Use Our Senses . Approximately 10 min. Color. Producer: James M. Hansen. Distributor: Herbert E. Budek Films and Slides, 1967.	4. Use body movement with or without music to increase body awareness.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

- I, B. Use the "Mystery Box" idea.
1. Start with three objects that have definite forms and textures. Gradually increase the number of objects.
2. Observe and identify the objects by name.
3. Touch the objects and describe their properties.
4. Place the objects in the "Mystery Box" so that they cannot be seen.
5. Have the child work individually or choose a partner.
6. Identify the objects by touch.

I, B. Use sandpaper letters, numerals, and braille to develop tactile skills.

TEACHER:

I, C. Listen to story records and stories from books. Ask questions to ascertain how well the pupils listened. Discuss the necessity of careful listening for maximum enjoyment.

TEACHER:

I, C. Record each child's voice on a tape recorder. Have the children listen to identify the voices as the tape is replayed.

I, C. Use rhythm instruments to have the children:

1. Identify the instrument by name.
2. Correlate the sound with the name of the instrument.

ASSESSMENT TASK

I, C. Invite a deaf person to visit the classroom to demonstrate the senses used to compensate for deafness. Follow this activity (at another time) by inviting a small group of deaf children to visit the class. Note: Finger spelling and sign language could be taught.

Charlip, Remy and Mary Beth, and Ancona, George. Handtalk: An ABC Book of Finger Spelling and Sign Language. 52 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York, New York 10017: Parents' Magazine Press, 1974. (I, C)

I, C. Use the "Telephone Game" for practice in careful listening. Start the game with a one-line message, such as, "Today my dog will follow me to school." Have the message whispered to each child in a chain situation. When the last child receives the message, have him relate it as he heard it. Have the children compare this message with the original message and discuss possible reasons for the difference.

I, C. Tape environmental sounds during a listening walk. Identify the sounds which are heard.

TEACHER: I, D. Play a game in which a child is blindfolded (optional) and given an object to smell. The child tries to identify the object by its smell. Example: 1. Onion

2. Lemon
3. Flower
4. Soap
5. Toothpaste.

58

Play a "Match the Smell" game. The learner will identify and describe each of the scents and match two identical scents which have been prepared in color-coded baby food jars. Examples: 1. Vinegar 2. Apple juice 3. Onion 4. Perfume (I, D).

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

I, E. Identify sweet, sour, bitter, and salty foods.

Example: 1. Sweet-sugar, candy

2. Sour-lemons, limes

3. Bitter-bitter chocolate

4. Salty-salted peanuts, potato chips.

I, E. Identify foods that are identical in appearance but that have different tastes.

Example: 1. Granulated sugar-salt

2. Karo syrup-water

3. Confectionary sugar-flour

4. Orange Tang-unsweetened orange Kool-Aid.

TEACHER:

I, E. Draw or find pictures showing foods which children like. Discuss the reasons for their liking certain foods.

I, E. Keep a record of foods eaten over a period of two days. Share the record with your classmates. Discuss the favorite foods, as well as those which were not too well liked. Use facial expressions, gestures, or words to convey reactions to tasting foods. Act out the words. Have the class identify the possible foods which may be matched with each dramatization.

I, E. Plan a "Tasting Bee" for the class. Provide samples of foods which vary in taste-sweet, sour, salty, bitter. After each child has had an opportunity to taste samples of different kinds of foods, have the children describe the difference in the taste. Record the descriptive words for future use.

II. Physical factors

- A. Body features
- B. Body structure

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

II,A. View one's self using a full-length mirror to identify parts of the body.

II,A. Play partner games and songs, such as "Busy Bee" and "Will You Come?" which involve the use of body parts.

1. "Busy Bee" - Choose partners. Give directions, such as "back to back, shoulder to shoulder, nose to nose." As the parts of the body are called, the partners match these parts with each other. Say the words, "Busy Bee." The children hurry to find new partners and the game begins again.
2. "Will You Come?" - Teach the song to the children. Have the children choose partners and dramatize the song.

II,A,B. Choose a friend. Take turns and draw life-size outlines of each other. Have the child lie down and trace an outline of the body on a large double sheet of paper. Cut out, color, stuff, staple, or sew the layers together. Dress the figure.

II,A,B. Listen to the record, "The Hokey Pokey." Discuss the parts of the body involved in the record. Play the record and perform the suggested motions.

TEACHER:
II,A,B. Measure and record the height of each child at the beginning and at the end of the year to observe the physical growth.

TEACHER:

Remove several parts and have the children identify them. Have the children remove and scramble the parts, then reconstruct the entire form on the flannelboard. This may be done individually or in groups.

II, B. Use the chalkboard to make an add-on person by playing a game, such as "Make Me." Make picture word cards for each part of the body. Place the cards in a box. Have one child select a card and draw the part on the chalkboard. Allow other children to take turns, following the same procedure. The finished product should show a completely proportioned human form.

CONTENT

Each person possesses both common and unique physical characteristics.

- I. Likenesses and differences in physical appearance of people

TEACHER: I, A-C. Show pictures of boys and girls of many ethnic groups. Discuss the differences and similarities. Record the children's responses. Discuss what might happen if all children looked alike.

- A. Sex: male or female
- B. Size of body
- C. Color and shape of eyes
- D. Color and texture of hair
- E. Color and texture of skin

TEACHER: I, B. Have each child bring in several photographs showing different stages of his growth. Compare the physical differences at different ages. Display the pictures on a bulletin board or a chart to show the progressive stages of development.

TEACHER: I, C. Find pictures of different colors and shapes of eyes. Provide a mirror for the child to match the color and shape of his eyes with those in the pictures.

I, D. Have each child examine a strand of his hair under a magnifying glass or a microscope. Compare it with that of a friend.

I, E. Cut out magazine pictures and make a collage of people with many skin colors. Display the collage in an appropriate place.

Instructional Objective 3:

Given situations which involve the emotions of love and hate, the learner will be able to demonstrate that love and acceptance are an important part of his relationships with others.

CONTENTS

ASSESSMENT TASK

Love and acceptance are basic human needs.

I. Sensitivity to human emotions

A. Understands and defines love and acceptance in his own terms

B. Understands and defines hate and rejection in his own terms

C. Examines his use of love (acceptance) and hate (rejection) in his responses to others

D. Identifies ways in which he responds to love (acceptance) and to hate (rejection)

I, A. Enumerate the meanings of love. Have each child select the meaning which he prefers and give the reason for his choice.

I, A. Make a heart-shaped "Love Book" by drawing or cutting pictures from magazines that depict feelings of love.

I, B. Have the child find pictures where facial expressions seem to portray feelings of hate.

I, B. Ask the child what hate means to him. Have him name something he hates and tell why.

I, C. Discuss ways of showing kindness. Ask each child to perform at least one kind act during the school day. Discuss and record, at the end of the day, ways in which the child has shown kindness.

I, C. Role play situations in which a child is rejected by a group because of his speech, socks, kind of shoes, or color of shirt. Discuss the reasons why the rejection of the child was fair or unfair. Have the children change roles in order to give them the experience of being both the rejectee as well as the rejector. Then role play to show the acceptance and appreciation of differences.

A. Examines daily encounters

II, A. Relate experiences which show how parents become cross or angry because of specific reasons but still love their children.

B. Identifies special occasions

II, A. Provide an opportunity for the children to evaluate a school situation in which hate and rejection provoked negative responses. Have the group suggest alternative ways of responding which might result in improved relationships with others.

II, B. Discuss the meaning of Valentine's Day. Ask the children why they give Valentines and to whom they like to give them.

II, B. Discuss Christmas and Hanukkah. Have the children name the persons and things associated with these holiday seasons which suggest love.

II, B. Discuss Mother's Day and Father's Day. Why are these days special and how are they celebrated?

I,A-G. Construct a "My House and My Family" folder by folding a piece of drawing paper in half and cutting it in the shape of a house. Draw and color the front and back of "My House" to match the child's dwelling. Put in windows, doors, and decorations for the outside of the house. Open the folder and draw a picture of the family members "inside" the house. Display "houses" and have the child discuss his house and the family members.

II. Definition of one's role as a member of a family.

A. Duties

B. Responsibilities

C. Aspirations

II,A-B. Display various pieces of equipment which mothers or fathers may use in their work at home or on the job. If the equipment is not available, substitute pictures. This activity is designed to show that mothers and fathers may assume different roles in different families. Have the child match the equipment or pictures with picture cards which include the names of family members. Use pictures of different ethnic groups. Following this activity, hold a group discussion about the possible conclusions which the children may draw. Example: sameness of the roles and inter-changeability of the roles.

Every human being has the same basic needs and every human being is dependent upon others for the complete satisfaction of these basic needs.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Following the discussion, have each child draw a picture to illustrate something of interest to him. Children may write sentences to accompany the pictures. Arrange the pictures in booklet form; have the children select a title and design a cover. Place the booklet in the library corner or share it with another class.

I.C. Explore your surrounding areas for possible resources that will promote aesthetic growth. Example:

1. Commercial children's shows
2. Museums
3. Children's theatre
4. Festivals
5. Art shows
6. Parks
7. Human resources

II. Identification of specific needs

A. Understanding and evaluating personal needs
Example: The need to sleep and the need to eat

B. Satisfying basic needs according to different individuals and their lifestyles

II.A. Develop the understanding that all living things eat and sleep. Give each child a response card with yes on one side and no on the other. Have him hold up the appropriate response for the following situations:

1. Snakes eat - snakes sleep
2. Trains eat - trains sleep
3. People from China eat - people from China sleep
4. Tables eat - tables sleep
5. Books eat - books sleep
6. Girls eat - girls sleep
7. English people eat - English people sleep
8. Spanish people eat - Spanish people sleep
9. Cats eat - cats sleep
10. We eat - we sleep

Have the children discuss the reasons for their answers.

1. Land influences-types of shelter

II,B. Have the child draw his home. Mount the pictures and make a display showing the different types of housing. Compare the types. They might include:

1. Townhouses
2. Single family dwellings
3. High rise apartments
4. Row houses
5. Others

2. Ethnic environments-types of food, methods of eating, and mode of dress

II,B. Make murals of different types of neighborhoods. Example:

1. Inner city
2. Rural
3. Urban
4. Suburban

II,B. Use various materials (boxes, blocks) to construct different types of dwellings.

1. Townhouse
2. Apartment
3. Farm
4. Single family dwelling

II,A,B. Have the children make the following cut-outs:

1. Their sleeping room at home - their eating room at home
  2. A place where they have slept or eaten other than their own home.
- Display the cut-outs with labels. Use this for vocabulary development. Children may invite others to visit the room to see the display.

II,B. Use National Geographic magazines or other sources to display different types of terrain to show how the land influences the type of shelter.

1. Desert
2. Forest
3. Swamp
4. Grassland
5. Mountain area
6. Ocean
7. Snowy area

Negroes</li> <li>C. Caucasians</li> </ul>	TEACHER: I, II, A-F. Write a letter to the parents and ask them to talk with their child about his ethnic background. Request them to send the name of their ethnic group to the class by the child. With this information, compile an identification chart to show the child's name and his ethnic background. In many cases, the ethnic background could be a combination of heritages, such as Scotch-Irish, English-Italian, or others. I, II. Use the same information concerning the child's ethnic heritage for a major activity. Make stickpin flags using the child's name and then, using a globe or a large flat surface, help the child to locate a place for his flag which represents his ethnic background. For the child who does not have this information, his flag can be located in Maryland. To reinforce further the idea of "ethnicity," make the stickpin flags to represent the actual country inhabited by each child's ancestors. Thus, each child has a unique object with which to identify. TEACHER: I, II. Every person in the United States is a member of an ethnic group.

The visitor could share ethnic stories; show and demonstrate types of clothing which would be peculiar to that ethnic group; demonstrate and teach the children dances, songs, and games of each ethnic group. The visitors could also help the children locate on a globe or wall map the countries from which they draw their ethnic heritage.

TEACHER:

I, II. Give the children magazines, such as Ebony and National Geographic. Have them cut out pictures which clearly show people of the various races. Have the children paste these pictures on a large cutout map of the United States to indicate that our country is a mosaic of all cultures.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Each culture has its own learned attitudes and activities which help to shape the behavior patterns of that group.

I. Media for exhibiting life styles of ethnic groups

- A. Neighborhoods
- B. Ethnic newspapers
- C. Ethnic movies
- D. Ethnic radio and TV programs

I,A-D. Take a bus trip to Baltimore City in order for the children to see such places as "Little Italy," the Chinese section of town, and the American Indian Study Center on South Broadway.

Point out to the children the store signs and restaurant signs, many of which are in the language of a particular ethnic group. If time permits, make arrangements for the children to visit the shops, restaurants, bakeries, synagogues, or other places for the purpose of seeing and, perhaps, tasting ethnic foods and for interacting with the people at these locations. Provide for follow-up activities, such as composing chart stories, drawing pictures, making ethnic dolls, role playing, and listening to tapes recorded while visiting in these neighborhoods.

I,A-D. Assemble activity centers each of which focuses on one ethnic group. Place toys, storybooks, records, tapes, pictures, filmstrips and previewers, easy maps, and a globe in each center. Locate on the globe or map the places where the toys were made. Find ways to share the information which has been learned.

CONTENT

In the United States, a multiplicity of cultural groups live together and form a cultural mosaic.

II. Cultural groups retain their ethnic individuality

A. By living together in neighborhoods

B. By operating ethnic businesses

1. Stores
2. Restaurants

C. By parents and ethnic schools teaching their children

1. Ethnic language
2. Traditions and customs

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

II, C. Learn some songs or poems in French, Spanish, German, Japanese, or other languages.

II, C. Listen for words in other languages that are similar to the words you know and recognize. Make a list of these.

ASSESSMENT

Example:

1. Participating in or watching a baseball game
  2. Riding on a bus
  3. Constructing a community
- The ideas that each child expresses orally are an important part of assessment, as well as the content of the drawing.

LEVEL I -- THEME II: ALLIANCE FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY ETHNIC GROUP

Instructional Objective 4: Given the background and cultural origins of various ethnic games, the learner will be able to name, play, and create different and similar childhood activities.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
Sharing childhood activities brings children of different backgrounds closer together.	I, A.B. Provide examples of games which are played by all children everywhere. Have the children participate in the following: Jump rope : Rhymes which may be used include:  JUMP AROUND THE WORLD By Sharon Friedman (Sung to the tune of "Row, Row, Row, Your Boat.") Jump, jump, jump the rope All around the world Slowly go Quicker now Fun for boys and girls. Jacks : Instead of using regular jacks, have the children play games using a ball and beads, seashells, stones, fruit or flower seeds. Baseball : Baseball is played in many areas of the world. Note: Japan has a Little League. Allow the children to participate in a baseball game and then pose the following questions to them: 1. Could this game be played in a different location in another land? 2. Could you play this same game and use equipment other than a bat, ball, or a mitt? 3. Can you think of a place or land where you could not play this game. Why? 4. Why is this a good game for practicing working together?	Hunt, Sarah Ethridge. Games and Sports Around the World . 79 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10016: The Ronald Press, 1964.	Divide the children into small groups. Each group will choose a leader who will name an ethnic game, establish the rules, and participate in the game. Use the same procedure until each member of the group has assumed a leadership role selecting different games.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Checkers: For a change use objects other than checkers on the boards, such as counting cubes, or bottle caps.

I.C. Discuss how the various ethnic celebrations originated.

I.C. Make masks and costumes which are an important part of ethnic celebrations in many countries. Give each child two large paper bags. Using tempera paint and construction paper, have each child design a simple holiday costume and mask. Encourage him to design a costume which he would enjoy wearing and which would make him happy.

I.C. Plan a St. Patrick's Day Parade. Have the children wear green. Provide green construction paper for making hats and shamrocks for the children. Allow each child to make a green flag with his own special design on it. Attach twigs or sticks to the flags in order for the children to carry them.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Maintain the same groups, but this time give each group a riddle about a certain holiday! For example: This day comes once a year. On this day, you may get a present. Also, you may eat a cake. What holiday is it?

Birthday!!

The answer should come from individuals within the group. Also, the person giving the answers is asked to name an ethnic culture to which the holiday is unique. In the case of the birthday, the answer is "All."

I.C. Have the class construct a large papier-maché dragon. Obtain a recipe for papier mache paste. One variation: wallpaper paste mixed to a consistency of a thick cream soup. The dragon is representative of the Chinese New Year. Form the dragon from wads of newspaper made into a large ball. Add the features using empty oatmeal containers, empty paper towel rolls, egg cartons. Secure the containers by using strips of newspaper and papier-mache glue. Secure all parts of the dragon together by using strips of paper and glue. Consult the art teacher or art manual for further directions. When the dragon dries, paint it with brightly colored paints.

I, C. Make a Mexican pinata. Use a large paper bag. Fill it with candy, tiny favors, and other surprises. Tie the bag with a string. Cover it with glue and strips of colored tissue paper. Hang it from the ceiling. Have the children take turns batting it with a stick to break it open. When the pinata opens, the children may share the rewards according to the custom of Mexican children at holiday celebrations.

II, A-C. Have the children participate in games which are played in many cultures but which are given different names in different cultures.

Ta Mbele-Africa. Pronounced Tom Bailey, the game is played like Simon Says. The children must perform the action only if Ta Mbele (Simon Says!), "Do this." If he says, "Do that," the child must not perform the action. If he performs the action, he is out of the game.

Hand Clapping. Performed in many cultures using different sounds for clapping accompaniment. Examples:

1. Records
  2. Drums
  3. Song by one person
  4. Piano
  5. Live orchestra or chorus
- Besides hand clapping, games may include finger snapping, knee smacking, foot tapping.

Blindman's Bluff-Africa. Choose two children from the group. Have the other children stand in a circle. One child is "it." He picks up two sticks, moves to another area within hearing distance and begins to click his sticks. Another child is blindfolded and must try to find out the source of the clicking.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

The "Click" may move to another area to make things more difficult. When the "Blindman" reaches the clicker, two other children may be chosen.

Tsao-Tsao-China-(Similar to Blindman's Bluff). Choose a child to be "it." Use a blindfold. That child is the "hen." The other children are scattered around and are known as "chickens." The "hen" tries to find the "chickens" and peck at them. The "chickens" make cackling sounds to let the "hen" know where they are. The "chickens" move about trying to keep from being "pecked," and at the same time trying to peck at the "hen."

Bowling-Africa. Place any number of corn cobs at the end of a long narrow space. The children roll the ball and try to knock down the corn cobs.

Buffalo Bowling-American Indian. Play a bowling game in which a ball is rolled across a huge buffalo robe. To play the game, have the children hit the ball with a stick and try to roll it all the way across a rug or a large piece of cloth.

Stone, Scissors, and Paper-China, Japan. Play the game with pairs of children. The symbol for stone is a closed fist; for scissors-two straightened fingers (middle and index) pointing upward; for paper-five fingers extended outward. The children repeat the words "stone," "scissors," "paper" shaking their closed fists at each other. After repeating the words, they exhibit the symbol for one word. If one child shows scissors and the other paper, the "maker" of the scissors symbol may tap the other person on the wrist because scissors cut paper.

Other possible combinations include:

Stone and paper-paper covers stone

Stone and scissors-stone breaks scissors

Stone and stone-repeat

Japan-Jan, Ken, Pon

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Bag Racing-Holland. Have each child stand in a burlap bag holding the sides of the bag with both hands. Race by jumping from the starting line to goal line.

Kick the Stick Relay-American Indian. Choose two teams of six or more children lined up in relay formation at a starting line. Place a crooked stick about 12 inches long in front of each team. The first player kicks the stick to the goal and back. The stick must be kicked along the ground, not in the air. The first player leaves the stick in front of the next player on his team. That player repeats the performance. The first team to have all its runners complete the course wins.

Lame Chicken Race-China. Place ten sticks on the ground arranged to resemble a ladder. The children must hop over each stick without touching any of the others.

Tag Games-Mexico, Africa. Play the game with "it" as a lion which is chasing a deer (Africa) or "it" as a wolf chasing a lamb (Mexico).

III. Give the children various objects, such as chalk, balls of varying sizes, eraser, egg timers, popsicle sticks, beads, sunflower seeds, string. Have the children create a game of their own using these materials.

III. Plan an exhibit of dolls from all over the world. Utilize the collections of parents, school personnel, and children to provide dolls for the exhibit. Label each doll according to its country of origin. After the children have observed the dolls for elements, such as color, style of clothing, type of materials used, and accessories, provide them with the following materials to make their own dolls:

- A. Seashells
- B. Beads
- C. Stones
- D. Fruit or flower seeds
- E. Coins
- F. Bottle caps

Instructional Objective 5:

Given the names of several ethnic personalities, the learner will be able to identify these people and to state the contributions which they have made to our cultural heritage.

CONTENT

Various ethnic personalities have made important contributions to our cultural heritage.

I. Important personalities in the arts

- A. Seiji Ozawa
Conductor of San Francisco
Symphony
Japanese
- B. Vikki Carr
Singer

- D. Roberta Flack
Singer,
Humanitarian
Black American
- E. Doug Kingman
Water color artist
Chinese

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I,II,III. Make an "Ethnic Personality of the Week" bulletin board. Choose one ethnic personality. Display a picture and collect information about this person. Encourage each child to contribute a statement or a picture representative of the personality. (Be certain to include the child's name.)

I,II,III. Give the children riddles about famous members of ethnic groups.

Example:

"I am a very funny man.
I am on TV
I have a friend named Geraldine,
Who Am I?"
Elizabeth Wilson

Ask the children to guess the identity of the personality. Supply additional clues if necessary. Show a picture of the personality and then supply the answer.

I,II,III. Use a primary typewriter to type stories about famous members of ethnic groups. Prepare a bulletin board and arrange the stories on it with a large picture of the person above each story. Use the stories in several ways:

1. As a reading lesson the children in a group may work with the teacher.
2. As a drawing and writing activity the child may copy a story and

ASSESSMENT TASK

Have each child identify ethnic personalities and state their contributions to our heritage.

Use magazine pictures or photographs of people. Cut out only the faces of the people. From mail order catalogues, newspapers, and magazines, cut out bodies of ethnic personalities wearing all types of clothing. Mount on cardboard the face of the important person and "dress" the model in outfits from the second group of pictures.

Famous people will be dressed in clothes that are not indicative of their profession.

Example:

1. Sitting Bull dressed in dungarees.
2. Wilt Chamberlain dressed in a doctor's uniform.
3. Seiji Ozawa dressed in swimming trunks.

3. As a game (with younger children), play a "guessing game." Read the story using all the words except the name of the personality.

Allow the children to supply the name.

4. As a listening activity, use the tape recorder to record stories about people. Have the children listen to the tape and discuss it.

An example of a typical story follows:

Jim Thorpe

He grew up on an Indian Reservation. He hunted, fished, swam, and roped horses. One of his ancestors was the great Indian Chief, Black Hawk. Jim Thorpe was a football star. He was also good in baseball, track, and many other sports. He has been called the greatest athlete in the world.

Note: Alter the story, using appropriate vocabulary for your group.

III. Read a story about how the Indians taught the Pilgrims to make popcorn. Pop some popcorn! Suggested recipe:

Popcorn
Popcorn
Oil
Salt
Melted butter (optional)

Pour about 1/4 cup of oil into an electric popcorn popper (preferably the kind with a glass top so the children can watch). Add popcorn. Cover. Have bowls or baskets available so the children can salt small amounts of popcorn.
Note: Alter according to the level. Write language experience stories about popcorn making.

III. Make peanut ice cream. This activity correlates with the contributions of George Washington Carver who discovered many uses for the peanut.

Peanut Ice Cream

2 pints whipping cream
3 eggs
1 cup brown granulated sugar
1 cup white granulated sugar
3 tablespoons vanilla
1-1/2 quarts milk
1 can (12 oz.) salted peanuts

Procedure:
Cream sugar and eggs together thoroughly. Add the milk, cream, and vanilla, stirring constantly. Pour the mixture into the freezer can. (Note: The can should not be more than 2/3 full to allow for expansion). Place the freezer can of ice cream mix in the tub of the ice cream maker. Set the top in place. Alternately add one cup of crushed ice and 1/4 cup of rock salt or table salt around the freezer can, until the ice and salt mixture comes to the lid of the freezer can. Start the mixing process or have the children take turns cranking, if a hand mixer is used. Do this for 20 minutes. Drain off the excess water from the tub; wipe off the cover to ensure that no salt is near the top; remove the dasher and add the peanuts which have been crunched in a plastic bag by using a rolling pin. Add the peanuts to the ice cream and stir. Replace the dasher carefully and recover. Repeat the churning and icing process for several minutes. Drain the excess water from the tub; remove the tub and clean the ice cream off the dasher. Plug the hole in the lid. Pack ice around the tub of ice cream. Cover the entire freezer with newspaper and let it chill for 30 minutes or more.

LEVEL I, --THEME II: ALLIANCE FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY ETHNIC GROUP

Instructional Objective 6: Given a variety of experiences, the learner will be able to demonstrate that many ethnic groups have contributed to America's rich cultural heritage.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
America has a rich cultural heritage.	I, II, III. Gain the understanding that music is expressed in many ways by different people. Provide the children with a large piece of bulletin-board backing. Divide it into sections and have the children depict the following activities, using either colored chalk, paint, crayons, or magic markers.	White, Ann Terry. Aesop's Fables . 201 East 50th Street, New York, New York 10022: Random House, Inc., 1964.	Demonstrate that many ethnic groups have contributed to America's rich cultural heritage by participating in an ethnic talent show.
I. Musical instruments		Belting, Natalia M. The Long Tailed Bear and Other Indian Tails . 3 West 57th Street, New York, New York 10019: Bobbs-Merrill Co., Inc., 1961.	Since it would be difficult to display every aspect of an ethnic group's culture, a child may choose to do one or several of the following:
A. Band and orchestra instruments	1. People singing	Arnott, Kathleen, African Myths and Legends . 19 Union Square West, New York, New York 10003: Henry Z. Walck, Inc., 1963.	1. Do an ethnic dance
B. Instruments peculiar to an ethnic culture	2. People dancing	Aiki. Three Gold Pieces . 201 East 50th Street, New York, New York 10022: Pantheon Books, Inc., 1967.	2. Prepare an ethnic food
II. Ethnic dances	3. People playing instruments		3. Make and play an ethnic instrument
A. Symbolic dances	4. People dancing to music.		4. Sing a song from an ethnic group
B. Dances for holidays or special days	I, B. Make simple string, percussion, or wind instruments, such as rattle, thumb piano, drum, xylophone, whistle, flute, or wind chimes. Compare these instruments with known European, African, American Indian, and Oriental instruments. Make up songs to play, words to sing, and dances to be accompanied by the instruments.		5. Build a model of a house in another culture
C. Dances for everyday entertainment	II, A-C. Learn and perform in groups such dances as the following:	Ohivkumar, K. The King's Choice . 52 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York, New York 10017: Parents' Magazine Press, 1961.	6. Give instructions for playing an ethnic game
III. Ethnic songs			7. Recite a poem representative of an ethnic culture
A. Folk songs			8. Read to the class an ethnic folk or fairy tale
B. Fun songs
C. Action songs

teach them to the class or invite a resource person to visit the class and teach the dances.

III, A. Use the song from the book A Treasury of Jewish Folksongs (see resource) "Hob Ich Mir A Kleynen Michalke" ("I've a Friend Called Michalke, Michalke"). This is a Jewish game song about children who play the part of members of an orchestra. The friend, Michalke, is the leader of the game. He chooses his friends to play the instruments. When he is selected, he walks around the ring of singing children who try to imitate him and his instruments. Jewish words and their translations are:
Whistle--Fayfele Fiddle --Fidele
Bugle --Trubetska Triangle--Tsimbele
Drum --Daykele
In the song, five instruments are mentioned. Add more, if desired. If the music for this song is not readily available, have the children chant the poem and play the game. If A Treasury of Jewish Folksongs is unavailable, have the children use the English words and insert the Jewish words for the names of the instruments.

Rice Cakes

- 3 oz. butter or margarine
- 6 oz. marshmallows
- 8 oz. Rice Krispies

Melt butter in a 3-quart saucepan. Add marshmallows-a few at a time-and cook over low heat. Add Rice Krispies and mix. Press the mixture into a buttered 12" x 9" pan. Refrigerate. Cut into squares and serve.

V,A-E. Construct a multi-ethnic community.

Use a large table, or any available area. Use the following materials: tooth picks, twigs, grass, hay, poster board, leaves, sand pebbles, popsicle sticks, paints, and paper. Make different kinds of homes from these materials to place in the multi-ethnic community.

Construct:

- 1. Mud homes
- 2. Grass homes
- 3. Tents or teepees
- 4. Log cabins

VI. Draw or cut out pictures of a scene in a cold climate, or, if a child has lived in a year-round warm climate, have him make contrasting pictures of winter in both kinds of climates. Include appropriate clothing worn for the type of climate shown.

VI,A-C. Show that hats worn by different people or upon different occasions vary in style and materials. Display the following:

- 1. African tribal head dress
- 2. Bamboo hat
- 3. Graduation hat-mortar board
- 4. Mexican hat
- 5. Beret
- 6. Yamalke-skull cap

7. Indian head dress
8. Bonnet
9. Turban
10. Helmet
11. Cowboy hat.

Provide the children with a variety of materials and allow them to make hats which they feel reflect their personalities. Examples: a football helmet, or a hat in the shape of a hot dog. Following is a list of materials to be used in hat making:

1. Construction paper
2. Straws
3. Tissue paper
4. Material remnants
5. Yarn, string
6. Felt
7. Buttons
8. Ribbon
9. Feathers
10. Cardboard
11. Rubber bands
12. Poster board
13. Masking tape/Scotch tape
14. Wire.

VI, A-C. Show how many people in different cultures create clothes from various things. Example:

1. Spanish goatherder wraps a blanket around his shoulders to use as a cloak.
2. People in India and Africa wrap material around their heads to make a turban or hat.
3. Women in Ghana use a bread tray as a hat to carry bread.
4. Cowboys in America use 10 gallon hats as buckets.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

VI, A-C. Illustrate the use of various kinds of materials to make clothes. Provide the children with the following: scarves, old pieces of cloth, aprons, sheets, old socks, stockings, and blankets. Have each child select the materials he wishes to use to make his costume.

VI, A-C. Make Indian moccasins in class from an old pair of socks. Cut off the top of each sock at the ankle. Turn down the top edge of the sock at the ankle and sew. Leave enough space to insert a drawstring. Use dried macaroni for decoration. Paint the moccasins with bright tempera paints.

VI, A-C. Check at home to determine if any family members have woolen or other materials manufactured in different countries. Seek other contributions of materials at school. Allow the children to feel the material and to raise questions concerning it. Try to obtain materials, such as silk, chintz, leather, lace, satin, fur, velvet.

VII, A, B. Use the book Cricket Songs by Harry Behn. It introduces the descriptive Haiku form of poetry. Write several Haiku poems with the class. The form for the poem follows:

Title
Five syllables

Seven syllables

Five syllables.

Example:

Wind

Sneezing and coughing

Wheezing along in the night

Adds noise to silence.

After writing one or two Haiku poems with the class, let the children try writing one. Make a large construction paper tree and display it on an appropriate wall. Have the children cut out paper leaves and write their poems on the leaves.
Place the leaves on the tree (This activity is reminiscent of a Japanese festival.) Use pantomime or mime to illustrate a Haiku poem.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

VIII, A, B. Use the following books by Shirley Glubok:

The Art of the Eskimo

The Art of Africa

Have the children observe the statues, pictures, and other artistic contributions of the various cultures and then describe the pictures in their own language. Write a language experience story of the children's impressions. Allow the children to illustrate the story.

Glubok, Shirley. The Art of Africa. 49 East 33rd Street, New York, New York 10016: Harper and Row, Publishers, Inc., 1966.

VIII, C. Make puppets dressed in costumes of the various ethnic cultures. Use paper bag puppets and color the costumes or use sock puppets and sew or glue the costumes. Use the puppets in a variety of creative ways to enrich the study of literature in ethnic cultures.

VIII. Decorate masks of construction paper with macaroni, beads, scraps of cloth, twine, yarn, and feathers. Have the children try to show facial expressions on the masks-happiness, worry, anger. The masks may be representative of African ceremonial masks, Indian masks with headdress, or masks for the Chinese New Year.

LEVEL I -- THEME II: ALLIANCE FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY ETHNIC GROUP

Instructional Objective 7: Given a variety of experiences, the learner will be able to identify languages other than English.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
People around the world speak many languages.	I, A. Have the children listen to the following story: Everyone talks but everyone doesn't speak the same language. Even in the beginning, man talked. He used his hands, his feet, and his face. He could make sounds and act out a message. He could show others that he was hungry by rubbing a hand across his stomach.	Hitte, Kathryn. What Can You Do Without A Place To Play? 52 Vanderbilt Avenue , New York, New York 10017: Parents' Magazine Press, 1971.	Play the version of "Alouette" in several different languages. Have each child identify the different languages as the song is played. ("Alouette" in different languages may be found in Fireside Book of Folk Songs .)
I. Recognizing differences in languages
A. By sound
B. By meaning
C. By sight	Say to the children, "Pretend that you lived a long time ago. Draw or paint a picture which shows that you are tired. Make another picture which shows that you are very, very angry." Share the variety of ways in which the children are able to portray the actions. Have the children demonstrate the action, to determine if the message is understood.	Rand, Ann and Paul. Spin and Sparkle . 757 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10017: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc., 1957.	Have each child identify at least one language other than his spoken language, using Mother Goose rhymes. (See resources in objective 6 Theme II.)
	I, A-C. Invite visitors who speak various languages to come to the class. The visitor might share a story or song or tell the class about his country. Inform the visitor prior to his visit concerning the work of the class. Prepare the pupils in advance to notice the differences in the visitor's language. Listen for words that are similar to the words they know and recognize.	I, A-C. II, A-D. Divide the class into four groups. Have each group give another word for "chair" (or use any other object) without using any known languages. Have each group create its own language. Allow time for the groups to discuss their ideas. At the close of a designated time, reassemble as a class. Use the chalkboard to compare the answers of the four groups. Follow with the question,

Why is it that we speak the same language in our classroom, yet we have selected ( ) different names for the word "chair"?

Possible Responses:

1. We don't think alike.
2. Our groups couldn't hear what the other groups were saying.
3. The word "chair" made me think of something that happened to me at home.

Continue with the following questions:

Does group one have a better way of saying "chair" than any of the other groups? Group two? Group three? Group four? Is any one language better than another? Give reasons to support your answer.

Ask the children: Why do you think languages all over the world are different?

Possible Responses:

1. People have different ideas.
2. People live in different places.
3. Different things happen to groups of people which give them ideas for words in their language.

- D. Others

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

III, A-D. Label windows, doors, and other objects in the room with words in English, as well as in a foreign language. Have the children learn the foreign words. Print the English word with a different color of ink.

III, A-D. Read familiar Mother Goose Rhymes in French. Have the class guess the rhyme and recite it in English. Which words in the French version gave you clues because they were like the English words in the rhyme? Repeat this activity with Mother Goose rhymes in other languages.

III, A-D. Show study prints of Chinese characters. Write some characters in Chinese. Demonstrate how to hold the brush upright just as the Chinese do. Have the children copy the characters in order to learn why the brush is held in an upright position. Utilize a resource person who can translate the children's names by using the Chinese characters. Allow the children to copy their name or a classmate's name.

III, A-D. Use the song "Alouette" to enhance the child's awareness of foreign languages. It is an old French tune which also helps the child to learn about the parts of the body.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Language is not necessarily a barrier to understanding and communication.

I. People receive many important non-verbal messages from their environment

A. Seasonal information

B. Urban or rural setting

C. Area residents

II. People communicate through non-verbal patterns of behavior

A. Actions

B. Signs

C. Gestures

D. Symbols

E. Facial expressions

TEACHER:

I. Take the class for a "wordless" walk in the school community. Observe environmental signs. Be prepared to have the children collect objects or information. Encourage them to gather objects of different shapes and varieties. Some of the children may wish to count cars by color, make, or body style. This may be done in pairs; one child may record while the other reports. Upon their return to the classroom, have the children classify the objects and the information in a chart, give it an appropriate title, and display it in an attractive manner. Additional charts and displays may also be made and given appropriate titles.

II. Present the books, Indian Sign Language and Indian Picture Writing. Have the children learn a few signs. Provide an opportunity for them to try to read the sign language messages.

II. Allow each child to choose an Indian name, such as Purple Butterfly or Running Buffalo. The child can design his own symbol for his new Indian name and a way to sign the name. (See resource)

II. Find examples of various types of danger and traffic signals. (continued)

Have the children demonstrate ways in which people communicate non-verbally by using the following activity:

Play descriptive music which the children have not heard in the classroom. (Selection from Tchaikovsky's "Nut Cracker Suite" or from Frofe's "Grand Canyon Suite" would be excellent for use.) After the children have heard the music once, distribute art materials and ask them to make pictures concerning what they have heard. (Older children may write poems or stories.) Have the children explain their pictures and display them in an appropriate area. Are there different interpretations of the same music? Why?

 $12.50/cassette. Viking Press, 1968.

II. Pantomime gestures and have the children interpret the meaning of each.

1. Rubbing your tummy (means good food)
2. Blowing on a bowl of soup (means the soup is too hot)
3. Motion with your fingers (means come here)
4. A wave (means hello or goodbye)
5. Closing your ears (means you do not want to hear)
6. Closing your eyes (means you do not want to see)
7. Shrugging your shoulders (means you do not know something)
8. Putting your fingers on your lips (means be quiet)
9. Holding your nose (means something smells bad)
10. Yawning (means you are getting sleepy)

II. Make simple stick, bag, or sock puppets to use in a puppet show without words. Use Mother Goose Rhymes that are familiar to the children. Examples:

1. "Jack and Jill"
  2. "Humpty Dumpty"
  3. "Old King Cole"
  4. "Little Bo Peep"
  5. "Little Miss Muffet"
  6. "Peter, Peter Pumpkin Eater"
  7. "Jack Be Nimble, Jack Be Quick"
- Have the children guess the rhymes. Use fables or fairy tales for the older children.

II. Have the children stand in front of a mirror and make faces or expressions that show:

1. Loneliness
2. Tiredness
3. Sadness
4. Happiness
5. Fear
6. Surprise

Discuss how facial expressions can communicate feelings.

1. How do your eyes look when you are angry? Happy? Sad? Surprised?
2. How does your mouth look when you are angry? Happy? Sad? Surprised?
3. How do your eyebrows look when you are angry? Happy? Sad? Surprised?

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

II. Make class picture books entitled, Happiness Is, Sadness Is, Being Angry Is, and Being Afraid Is. Have the children draw pictures on different days to express how they feel. Write the children's feelings at the bottom of the picture. Assemble these pictures into booklets for use in the classroom.

II. Have each child complete the sentence, Happiness is _____. The teacher can then record the sentence. Allow each child to illustrate his sentence with a picture.

II. Use modeling clay or play dough to make people who exhibit a variety of feelings. Do you ever have these same feelings? Why or why not?

The following play dough recipe may be used:

1 cup flour
1 cup salt

1/2 cup water

Mix and knead. Wrap in waxed paper and store in a covered jar.

(See resource)

III. Many animals communicate with people to some degree

A. By gestures

B. By movement

III. Discuss animals that try to talk like people, such as parrots and myna birds.

III. Tell about animals that answer questions with a specified number of barks or stamps of the foot. What are these animals imitating?

1. How does a cat get your attention?

2. How can a cat make you understand its desire to go outside?

3. How does your pet show affection for you?

III. Read stories about animals that have done heroic things for people.

III. Use magazines to cut out pictures which show animals communicating in various ways. Compose and record stories about the picture.

IV. Music is a way of communicating feelings

- A. Human voice
- B. Hands (clapping)
- C. Feet (stomping)
- D. Sounds (drums and rattles)
- E. Others

IV. Play the record "Peter and the Wolf" by Prokofieff. Help the children to understand that the instruments of the orchestra sound like animals and people in the story. Stop the record frequently for discussion with the children. How do the strings sound like Peter? How does the clarinet in the lower register sound like the cat; the oboe like the duck? Play the record again for the children's enjoyment.

IV. Play some African music. Have the children react to the following questions:

1. How did the music make you feel?
  2. What did you want to do when you heard it?
- Play the African music again and allow the children to express themselves spontaneously through body movements, singing, or the use of instruments.

IV. Play oriental music. Follow the same procedure in questioning the children about the music and in allowing them to express themselves spontaneously to the music.

IV. Make instruments with sounds like those on the records.

Rattle: Put beans or pebbles in a paper or plastic cup and seal the top with paper. Put beans or pebbles in a spice or baking soda can.

Sandpaper blocks: Cover 2"x4" blocks with sandpaper.

Drum: Cover a large coffee can with a piece of inner tube. Punch holes in the edge of the tubing. Tie the tubing with twine through the holes.

Play the instruments as the African and Oriental selections are replayed. Play Latin and Indian music, asking questions and allowing the children to respond as the music suggests. How do these different kinds of music make you feel? Encourage the children to tell a story to accompany the music.

LEVEL I -- THEME III: BARRIERS TO EQUALITY: PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION

5. Grape Tang
6. Orange Tang
7. 3 oz. paper cups
8. Sugar
9. Mixing pot
10. Grapes

Make and record a recipe using these items. Each child can make and taste his own "Witch's Brew" and relate his reaction to the teacher. (Note: Make a witch's hat for a prop)

ASSESSMENT TASK

Do the following activities with the children:

1. Turn off all the lights and draw the blinds until the room is very dark.
2. Slam the door suddenly.
3. Play a record with spooky sounds.
4. Play a record in which people speak Hebrew or Yiddish.
5. Talk with people pleasantly.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Children are fearful of the unknown.

ASSESSMENT TASK

122

Give each learner two picture cards with the following four words on them.

As you show each object or perform each activity, have the children raise the two slips which best indicate how they feel about that particular stimulus. An example might be: Afraid - not familiar. As you provide each subject, write its name on a large piece of chart paper and tally the responses of the children. At the end of the activity, convey the results to the children and ask for verbal descriptions of their feelings on particular stimuli. Example: "Phil, how did you feel when I showed you the sharp knife?" Answer: "It made me feel all cold inside."

You may want to substitute other words for the feeling-reaction words on the cards. Examples might be: Pretty - familiar; ugly - unfamiliar; happy - familiar; sad - unfamiliar.

CONTENT

All people have strengths and weaknesses.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I,II,B,C. Provide the following activities to help in the evaluation of the strengths and weaknesses of others.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Have each child list or make a picture chart of "My Ten Favorite Smells" or "My Ten Favorite People" or "My Ten Least Favorite Moments" or "My Ten Worst Fears." The lists could cover a variety of subjects to reveal positive and negative aspects of the child's world.

In small groups, when the activity is complete, the teacher may pose the following:

1. Do these things (people, places) make you feel good? Why?
2. Do they make you feel bad? Why?
3. Do Tommy's favorite things (least favorite) make you feel good? Why? Why not?
4. Why don't all children like or dislike the same things? Beth's? Why not?

I,II,D. Designate one day as a "Hobby or Special Interest Day." Have the children bring in their hobbies, or if they have a special talent, allow them to share it with the class. Encourage and provide for considerable interaction. The children may demonstrate their interest and request their classmates to participate in some aspect of it. Example: A stamp collector may ask a friend to help him put stamps in his book, or a doll collector may ask for help in setting up a display at the end of the day. Ask each child to tell one new idea he learned from one of his classmates during the day. Emphasize the idea that everyone can contribute or do something!

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

I, II, B, C. Allow the children to sit on the floor in a circle for "complaints and compliments time." The following questions will help to initiate the activity. (Later, as the children get used to this activity, the teacher's role is a passive one.)

Let's talk about the things which we did well today. Ask:

1. Who came in quietly?
2. Who was a good sport?
3. Who had good manners?
4. Who picked up litter?
5. Who shared materials?
6. Who did something nice for someone?

Now, let's talk about the things which we did not do well today. These are things or areas in which we need to improve. Ask:

1. How were we mean to others?
2. What did we do to hurt the feelings of others?
3. How could we have included someone whom we selfishly omitted from a game or activity?
4. Did we cause hurt feelings today by calling a person something other than his name?
5. What was your favorite part of the day?

Distributor: Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc., 757 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10017, 1970.	The learner will be able to identify how he will maintain his own individuality and do what he thinks is right by evaluating the following situations: 1. Taking turns in different settings. Example: consistently a child monopolizes the same activity. 2. Sharing things, friends, and work areas. Example: A child is possessive of another child's friendship. 3. Showing fairness during play time. Example: A child monopolizes a piece of play equipment for a longer period of time than his partner.
I. Motivations for people's actions	1. "Who Do You Think You Are?" 2. "What Happens Between People?" 3. "What Do You Expect of Others?" (See resource)
A. Ambition and goals	After showing the filmstrips, utilize the teachers' manual which has follow-up activities. Have the children describe a situation similar to one in each filmstrip in which they have been personally involved.
B. Desire to belong	II, A, B, C. Role play a story in which a little child has a toy. Leaving the toy on the floor, the child goes to get a drink of water. When the child returns, someone has the toy and refuses to give it back.
C. Desire to please self	Following the role play, have the children tell what happened and why the conflict occurred. Example: (Jealousy and lack of consideration.) II,A-D. Tell the following story to illustrate how one's actions may affect the feelings and behavior of others.

Tony was playing with his new truck. "R-r-r!" he shouted, as he rolled the truck on the floor. "Hey, give me that," yelled Tony's brother Jim, and he pinched his little brother's arm. Tony began to cry.

The children may discuss the following questions:

How do you think Tony felt when he was playing with his new toy?

How do you think he felt after his brother took it away from him? Why?

What do you think Jim should have said and done, if he wanted to play with Tony's truck?

The children may role play other similar situations.

Instructional Objective 5: Given a variety of situations in which many forms of discrimination are evidenced, the learner will be able to identify the forms of discrimination.

CONTENT

ASSESSMENT TASK

Discrimination may be conveyed in many ways and take many forms.

I. Factors which may contribute to the formation of opinion

A. T.V.

B. Radio

C. Word of mouth

D. Peer pressure

E. Magazines

F. Newspapers

G. Other advertising

I. Cut pictures of favorite toys, cereals, clothes, and snack foods, from magazines, newspapers, and other sources. Empty containers can be brought into the classroom. Have the children tell how the products were recommended through TV commercials or radio. Are there other similar products which are just as good or better? Involve the children in an investigation of possible products that are similar or better than the ones which were displayed as favorites.

I, A, B, E-G. Lead the children into a discussion of commercials through such questions as:
What are commercials?
Where can you find commercials or advertisements?

How many watch the commercials on T.V.?

Why do we have commercials?
Why do we watch commercials?
What do commercials tell us?
Are commercials always true? Why?
Can commercials be untrue? Why?
Do you ever buy things advertised in commercials?
How do you decide whether or not to buy?
What should help you to decide?

About five minutes later, pass some more of the brownies to several other children. Give seconds to a few of the children who already have one. Distribute all of the brownies in this way, favoring only some to receive the brownies. After all the brownies have been distributed, have the children assemble in a group. I, A. Play a recording of commercials taped from TV programs of interest to the pupils at this grade level. (Examples: Cartoon Festival, Captain Kangaroo, Flintstones, and Top Cat.)

Elicit discussion concerning the commercials which would or would not encourage the children to purchase the product advertised. Did the commercial exaggerate? If so, how?

I, A. Dramatize familiar commercials through role playing. (Throughout each dramatization, stress those parts of the commercial that might be true, untrue, or a mixture of both.)

I, E, F. Have the children bring to the class ads from magazines and newspapers. Examine, select, and classify the ads according to the persons who will use the product. Determine the statements in the ads that are true, untrue, or a combination of both. Select the part of the ad that attracts the most attention.

I, E. Show the children ads from magazines to acquaint them with the format. Stress the importance of listening carefully to the ads. After the ads have been presented, pose the following:

1. Was everything that was said about the product true?
2. Why did (or didn't) you want to try the product?
3. Would you try the product just because everyone else was trying it?

following questions to identify forms of discrimination:

1. Why do you suppose I gave the brownies to some children and not to others?
  2. How did you feel when you didn't get a brownie?
  3. How did you feel when you did get a brownie?
  4. Can you remember any time when you felt the same way as you did today?
- At the end of the activity, distribute brownies to the rest of the class.

Simulate other situations in which the children identify the forms of discrimination.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

4. If someone told you to try something or do something you didn't know anything about, would you? Why or why not?

I,A-G. Invent a new product to give practice in the power of persuasion. Ask the children to draw a picture of the product and then to write an ad (a few sentences; for younger children, a few words) to describe and sell it to the class. Example: The lollipopoozer! It's the biggest lollipop in the world! It's any flavor you want it to be! It's only one cent to buy it!

I,C,D. Bring to the class a variety of racing cars. Compare these cars. Does a brand name make the car better? Can all of the cars accomplish the same thing?

II,F. Magic Circle - A small group of children form a circle. Give one child in the group a lollipop.

Ask:

1. How did you feel when you received this lollipop?
  2. How did you feel as the only child to get a lollipop?
- Now have the receiver give a lollipop to another in the group.

Ask:

1. How did you feel when you gave someone something that made him feel good?
- Continue until all have given someone a lollipop.

Adapted from Drug Education K-6 -- Baltimore City Public Schools 1972.

II. Forms of discrimination

A. Name calling- (dumb, stupid)

B. Blaming someone when you are not sure if he is guilty

C. Segregating- (seating all the boys together or all of the girls together)

CONTENT

Discrimination may be conveyed in many ways and take many forms.

D. Aggressive behavior-

(lashing out at somebody for no reason at all)

E. Preconceived notions-(Jim is a mean boy because he always gets in trouble in music class)

F. Favoritism-

(allowing bright children to perform the important tasks in class)

G. Clique formation-

(associating only with certain people)

H. Judging-(discriminating against someone because of his clothes)

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

II,E. Have pictures of children of different racial backgrounds. Include:

1. Oriental child
2. Black child
3. American Indian child
4. Asian child
5. European child
6. Eskimo child

Show each picture to the children. Ask them if they think that this child might become one of the following:

1. President of the United States
2. A teacher
3. A doctor
4. A farmer
5. Owner of a children's camp
6. A policeman
7. A janitor
8. A baseball player
9. A singer
10. A postman

II,A-H. Make an "anti-discrimination" person by cutting out a large paper figure. Decorate the figure with facial features, hair, and a comical hat. The figure can provide the impetus for the following activities.

1. The children should view the figure as a person who always lives and works fairly and tries not to hurt anyone's feelings. They may want to ask him for advice, if they see someone discriminated against.
2. The figure may become a bulletin board. Have the children pin small slips of paper onto the feature with ideas for promoting good relations in class.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Discrimination may be conveyed in many ways and take many forms.

3. Provide a tape recorder for children who wish to talk anonymously about their hurt feelings. The teacher should react through individual and group discussions.

4. Have the figure hold a small box which could be a secret box. Whenever the children have a problem involving hurt feelings or some aspect of prejudice, they should state the problem on a piece of paper and give it to the figure. The teacher should provide written answers and return the slips to the child in private.

II. Display pictures of an inner city neighborhood, urban neighborhood, rural, and suburban neighborhood. Have the children role play situations in which a child newly arrived in a neighborhood, tries to make new friends and is rejected. Then, have the class show how a child might be welcomed.

Which is easier to know and talk about, the inner self or the outer self? Can we change ourselves? Which self is easier to change? Why?

C. Recognizing things about oneself which can be changed.
Example: a negative attitude.

Discuss:

1. Do you wish that anything could be different about your outer self?
2. Can you change that? Why?
3. What should you do about things which you cannot change?
4. What makes you feel good about your outer self?
5. What have your friends made you feel good about your outer self?
6. How can having one or more things to feel good about help you?

D. Recognizing things about others which can be changed.
Example: insensitivity to another person.

I, A-D. Show a collection of pictures of people displaying emotions. Identify the emotions in various pictures -- loneliness, fear, worry, jealousy. Help the children to realize that such inner feelings are experienced by everyone. Just as children learn ways to change their outer selves, they also sometimes change their inner selves. Use situations about jealousy or any other emotion that might be appropriate. Discuss how the feeling may be changed, if change is warranted, by:

1. Talking about it.
2. Thinking about it.
3. Acting positively to change it.

II, A. Have the children make chalk drawings that represent an act of cruelty and an act of kindness which they have experienced. Have each child discuss his work and relate the experience.

A. Cruelty can be manifested in the words or actions of an individual or group.

Instructional Objective 1: Given a set of standards, the learner will be able to identify the ways in which the people in his environment conform or fail to conform to these standards.

CONTENT

The rules, realities, and ideals in our American society influence each individual.

I. Identification of rules and standards for interaction in one's environment

A. Home rules

B. School rules

C. Community rules

D. National rules

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, A-D. Recall a game which the children have played. Ask the children to consider these questions:

1. Who makes the rules?
2. Does the biggest person make the decisions?
3. What might happen if everyone broke all the rules and no one cared?

I, A. Encourage the children to discuss rules which they follow at home. Record the rules and compare the likenesses and differences of the rules.

I, B. Have a child break a school rule by coming to class late, disturbing the other children, or tapping his pencil on his desk while a lesson is being taught. Ask the children how they think the class standards have been violated.

I, B. Divide the class into several groups and have each group dramatize a situation in which a friendship group had to make a decision about a rule. The rule could concern the need for following the leader to the cafeteria or the decision about an activity to play at recess.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Have each learner identify the ways in which people conform or fail to conform to a set of standards by using one of the following comic strips:

1. Peanuts
2. Dennis The Menace
3. Nancy
4. Donald Duck
5. Wee Pals

Have the children formulate hypothetical standards or ideals for the comic strip characters. Example:

1. When you wish to speak, do not interrupt others.
2. Try to help someone once in a while.
3. Always try to find something good to say about another person.
4. Always be willing to learn new things

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, B.C. Read the poem "Mary's Lamb" by Sarah Lucretia Hale.

Mary had a little lamb,
It's fleece was white as snow:
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

He followed her to school one day,
Which was against the rules.
It made the children laugh and play
To see a lamb at school.

(The boys and girls may think that the lamb broke the rule. Help the children to understand that the lamb does not know any better; therefore, he cannot be punished for breaking a rule. Mary knew better and should have exercised authority since the lamb was her responsibility.) Ask these questions:

1. Who broke a rule in the poem?
2. What was the rule?
3. Do we have a rule like this in our school?
4. What do you think would happen if we did not have this rule?
5. What other rules do we follow in school?
6. Who made sure that rules were followed in Mary's school?
7. Who makes sure that rules are followed at school?
8. How can girls and boys help each other to follow rules?

I, A-D. Formulate a rule which might be applicable to the behavior of children in other environments. For example: Formulate a rule for children living in

1. A jungle environment
2. A desert environment

5. If you see trouble developing, try to stop it.

Cut up separate frames of comic strip characters and glue each frame separately to a piece of cardboard. ## MATERIALS/RESOURCES

The rules, realities, and ideals in our American society influence each individual.

II. Identification of ideals versus realities

- A. The ideals
- B. The realities

- 3. A seashore environment
- 4. A mountain environment

II, A.B. Write the poem, "Dreams" by Langston Hughes, on chart paper and place it in an appropriate area as a hope for the future.

"Dreams"

by Langston Hughes

Hold fast to dreams
For if dreams die
Life is a broken-winged bird
That cannot fly.

Hold fast to dreams
For when dreams go
Life is a barren field
Frozen with snow.

Hughes, Langston. Don't You Turn Back: Poems by Langston Hughes. 201 East 50th Street, New York, New York 10022: Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., 1932.

II, A.B. Cut out a star for each child in the class or allow each child to cut out his own. On his star, have the child draw a picture of something which he dreams will someday be a part of his world. Mount the stars on a bulletin board next to the poem "Dreams" by Langston Hughes. A variation of this activity might be to have each child draw two stars. On one star he would draw something that is part of his environment today (reality) and on the other, a picture showing how he would like to change or improve his present environment (ideal).

III. Identification of reasons for conforming or failing to conform to established standards.

- A. Prejudice
- B. Non-prejudice

III, A.B. Set up a situation in which one child is ostracized because of appearance, age, color, sex, maturity level, or speech patterns. Indicate through the use of the following media, such as puppetry, a class film, or comic strip the reasons for showing feelings of prejudice or non-prejudice toward the child.

III, A.B. Use the picture study kit Black America-Yesterday and Today, pictures 8 and 15. Discuss the reasons for conforming or not conforming to the established standards as depicted in the pictures. Talk about how these standards were changed. (See resource)

B. Ability to empathize with another person or thing

C. Sense of fair play

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, A-C. Read the following poem, which shows a child who is uncaring of things smaller than himself, and ask the children how the poem made them feel. Have them tell how they would feel if they were...

1. The boy
2. The tiny fish
3. The crocodile.

"The Cruel Naughty Boy" Anonymous
Adapted from: Beastly Boys and Ghastly Girls. Poems collected by William Cole.

There was a naughty boy,
who sat upon the shore
A-catching little fishes by
The dozen and the score.

And as they squirmed and wriggled there,
He shouted loud with glee.
"You surely cannot want to live,
You're little-er than me."

Just then with a malicious leer,
and a capacious smile,
Before him from the water deep,
There rose a crocodile.

He eyed the little naughty boy
Then heaved a blubbery sigh,
And said, "You cannot want to live,
You're little-er than I."

ASSESSMENT TASK

Have each learner identify the insensitive attitude given in a situation involving some form of insensitivity. Have the learner use his own natural self-awareness and sensitivity to the situation by responding to certain stimuli in the following ways:

Provide each learner with finger painting paper and finger paints. The activity may take several days to complete in order to be most effective. Use records or tapes to play songs, stories, or rhymes. Excerpts from the selections should work well. The intent is to show opposite ways of treating people and things.

- II, A-C. IALAC Activity: Adapted from Health Education: A Curricular Approach to Optimal Health. Maryland State Department of Education. Read the story. IALAC to the class. Follow up with this activity: Select and read to the group a story which involves a child whose feelings are frequently hurt. Give each child a piece of paper with IALAC written on it to represent the IALAC of the child in the story. Have him rip the IALAC each time the child's feelings (in the story) are hurt.
- Continue by asking:
1. Did we all rip our IALAC at the same time?
  2. Why not?
  3. Have your feelings ever been hurt?
  4. How did you feel when your feelings were hurt?
  5. How did you react?
  6. What else could you have done?
  7. Do you think you have ever been the cause of someone's hurt feelings? When? How? Why?
  8. What could you have done to make the person feel better?

Tell the children, "Perhaps you would like to wear an IALAC sign today, pinned to your dress or shirt, and you can rip it as your IALAC is ripped during the day. Then, at the end of the day, we can talk about what happened to your IALACS, how much we have left, and what feelings we experienced during the day."

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

At the end of the day ask:

1. What events took place when some IALACS were torn?
2. Do we feel any responsibility for causing someone's IALAC to be ripped?
3. What would it require of each of us to be more sensitive to others?
(Thinking before acting or speaking)
4. Do teachers, as well as students, rip others' IALACS?
5. Do teachers, as well as students, get their IALACS ripped?

"THE STORY OF IALAC" (Self-Concept--Strategy I)

IALAC means "I am lovable and capable." Deep down inside each child has the belief that he is a lovable and capable human being.

Story: (Picture the IALAC as a large rectangular piece of oak tag. If each traumatic incident that occurs destroys some of Johnny's self-confidence, this oak tag could be ripped apart accordingly. How much can remain by bedtime?)

This is the story of Johnny: Each morning Johnny awakes with his IALAC whole and complete--he feels good about himself. Then, Johnny's mother yells angrily from the kitchen, "Get out of that bed! Didn't you hear your sister wake you? You cause everyone extra trouble every morning." Johnny feels a little guilty (rip). He gets up and begins getting dressed but he can't find his shoes. "I'm getting sick and tired of keeping your breakfast hot, Johnny! Sometimes I don't even care if you have any!" (rip) his mother yelled. Soon he comes to the kitchen to eat, but it's hard to do with his mother staring angrily at him. (rip)

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Finally, Johnny was on his way to the bus stop. He saw his friend, Greg, and ran to catch up, but he tripped and his books and math homework went flying into the dirt. What would his teacher say about his dirty paper? (rip) She'd never believe he couldn't help it. (rip)

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

The school day began with the weekly facts test. He wasn't too good at his multiplication facts, but he had studied them last weekend and knew them reasonably well at that time. After the test, they exchanged papers to check their answers. Becky leaned over and whispered, "Ha, ha, Johnny! You got ten wrong and I didn't miss any!" (rip) Johnny's teacher collected the papers and said, "Johnny, I thought you had studied. (rip) You can do better than that." (rip)

Later, Johnny went to lunch, worrying if his mom would still be angry with him after school. He didn't see the boy next to him and bumped into him, spilling the boy's tray of food everywhere. The boy growled, "Why don't you watch where you're going, dummy!" (rip) At recess Johnny was picked number ten in the kickball game (rip) and his friend, Greg, was number two-- again. (rip)

The afternoon went well and when Johnny got home, he was relieved to find his mother glad to see him. Before supper, his dad said, "I hear you gave your mother a lot of trouble about getting ready for school on time today. We're tired of talking to you about it--the next time you don't hurry up, I'm going to give you a good spanking when I get home!" (rip)

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

After supper Johnny asked his dad if he'd help him with his multiplication facts. "Can't you see I'm reading the paper, son? (rip) Go ask your mother." His mother said, "Oh Johnny! You mean you m'ssed ten! (rip) You should be able to remember how to do them for one week!" (rip)

Later that night when Johnny climbed into bed, he didn't have much IALAC left. A lot of other little things had ripped and torn it, too. He didn't know exactly why he felt so forlorn as he fell asleep... But he hoped tomorrow would be better.

Instructional Objective 3: Given an understanding of the basic rights of every individual, the learner will be able to identify those responsibilities which every individual must assume before he can fully enjoy these rights.

CONTENT

Everyone needs to exercise his rights and assume his responsibilities.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, A-C. Present the film, or read the story, "Evans Corner," to show how one individual exercised his rights and assumed his responsibilities.

I, A. Use the story, "The Little Red Hen," through role play, puppetry, record, filmstrip or book to further explain an individual's rights and responsibilities. (See resource)

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Galdome, Paul. The Little Red Hen. 815 Second Avenue, New York, New York 10017: Seabury Press, Inc., 1973. (I, A)

ASSESSMENT TASK

Have each learner identify those responsibilities which must be assumed by every individual before he can fully enjoy his rights by preparing individual rights and responsibilities books. Design each page of the book to contain a different medium for conveying the teacher's ideas. Choose from the following:

1. Pictures cut from magazines
2. Pictures made from newspaper scraps
3. Colored chalk drawing
4. Magic marker drawing
5. Cartoon drawing
6. Crayon etching
7. Collage drawing
8. Sponge painting
9. Gadget painting
10. Torn paper picture

The learner should have a page with a picture depicting a "right"-something which he has, or is allowed to do, or something which is important to him.

I, A-C. Talk about and record in chart form a list of rights to be exercised in the home, school, and the community. Ask the class, "What responsibilities go with these rights?"

II, A, B. Discuss the meaning of natural and earned rights. On a bulletin board, display pictures which depict activities involving natural and earned rights. Have the children label the pictures, natural or earned rights. How are responsibilities and rights related? Explain.

II. Identification of earned and natural rights in one's environment.

A. Natural rights
Example: The right to a birthday once a year

B. Earned rights:
Example: Reinforcement for doing something well

III. Identification of responsibilities in one's environment

- A. Personal responsibilities to other people or things
- B. Personal responsibilities to oneself
- C. Responsibilities of others to an individual

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

III, A-C. Use the poem "Sarah Cynthia Sylvia Stout" by Shelly Silverstein to show what happens when a child does not accept responsibility.

Sarah Cynthia Sylvia Stout
Would not take the garbage out!
She'd boil the water
And open the cans
And scrub the pots
And scour the pans
And grate the cheese
And shell the peas
And mash the yams
And spice the hams
And make the jams.
But though her daddy
Would scream and shout,
She would not take the garbage out.
And so it piled up to the ceilings:
Coffee grounds, potato peelings,
Moldy bread and withered greens,
Olive pits and soggy beans,
Cracker boxes, chicken bones,
Clamshells, eggshells, stale scones,
Sour milk and mushy plums,
Crumby cake and cookie crumbs,
At last the garbage piled so high
That finally it reached the sky.
And none of her friends
Would come to play.
And all the neighbors moved away.
And finally Sarah Cynthia Stout
Said, "I'll take the garbage out."
But then, of course, it was too late.
The garbage reached beyond the state
From Memphis to the Golden Gate.
And Sarah met an awful fate,
Which I cannot right now relate
Because the hour is much too late.
But children, think of Sarah Stout
And always take the garbage out.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Opposite the right, should be a picture depicting a "responsibility"-Something he feels he must do in order to be allowed to enjoy the right and to assume the privileges that go with it. Give the learner a sample sentence to assist him. Example: Right Responsibility
If I want Then I
to ... must ...

If I Then I
can ... must ...
If I Then I
am to must ... have ...

- The teacher may wish to have the children write these headings at the top of their pages and complete the sentence on their own. When the books are completed, bind them with hardback covers.
1. Staple all of the pages of the books together evenly. Leave a margin on the left side for binding tape.
  2. Prepare a title page and staple it to the front of the book.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Everyone needs to exercise his rights and assume his responsibilities.

III, A-C. Make a picture word chart of the poem. Place this chart beside a mural paper and allow the children to make an "add on" illustration of the poem. Provide at least three days for this activity.

III, A-C. Set up an "arbitration" system in the class. The emphasis should be on preventing conflicts before they occur. Allow the class to elect a class arbiter. Emphasize that the person chosen should be fair and responsible. Have the teacher act as the arbiter for the first two weeks of this experiment to set an example for the rest of the class. The function of the arbiter is to suggest ways of resolving a conflict without a physical or verbal battle. Alternative methods of resolving the matter should be suggested. Example: Two boys on the playground are about to have a fist fight over a dispute which involves a ball. A child should alert the arbiter. (If need be, the teacher should always have the final suggestion for the means of resolving the conflict.) The following are examples of alternatives to be used.

1. Both children should give their sides of the story.
2. The ball should be shared by all involved.
3. The ball shall be used by one of the people today and by the other tomorrow.
4. An adult should be asked for advice because the children will not cooperate. If the teacher feels that the children are not old enough to handle the responsibility of arbitration, request an upper grade child to serve in this capacity.

3. Use two pieces of heavy cardboard, about one inch longer and one inch wider than the pages which are to be inserted.
4. Use material of bright colors and thin texture to cover the cardboard. Glue the material firmly to the cardboard. Overlap the material on the inside covers.
5. Place and glue a piece of construction paper on the front and back inside covers to prevent any cardboard from showing.
6. Use bookbinding tape to attach the two pieces of cardboard together and to secure the pages in the book.
7. If bookbinding tape is not available, use masking tape to fasten the two covers together on the inside and to attach the pages to the cardboard. Use a piece of colored mystic tape on the outside to secure the two pieces of cardboard together. Have the children share their books with the class and then place them in the media center.

Instructional Objective 4: Given concrete evidences of some inequalities, the learner will be able to state solutions for resolving the inequalities.

CONTENT

ASSESSMENT TASK

Inequalities exist in our society.

I. Ways of eradicating inequalities in our society

A. Belief in the equal worth of every person

I, A. Use large lettering to make the sign, "Let There Be Brotherhood and Let It Begin With Me."
Use sentence strips and a magic marker to write what each child feels he might do to promote equality among all people. Write the child's thought on the sentence strip; have him sign his name to the sentence. An example might be:

"I will give a smile and a happy wave of my hand to all I see."

Arrange each of the strips around the Brotherhood Slogan.

B. Involvement in activities which contribute to the understanding of all people

I, A. Use the song "Happy Talk" from the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, South Pacific in which a young Polynesian girl teaches this song to an American. Emphasize that this song is an excellent one to help raise one's spirits and to teach to a friend who is unhappy. Also, "Happy Talk" means thinking happy thoughts about the future. Teach the song to the class. Then ask the children to teach it to a friend or relative to promote better understanding among people. (See resource)

I, B. Teach the children the following song in English and in French: ("Tell Me Why") or "Dites-Moi" from the movie South Pacific by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein. (See resource) It is a French (continued)

Shafel, Fannie and George. People in Action. 383 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10017: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., Subsidiary of Columbia Broadcasting System, 1970.

Have each learner state solutions for resolving some inequalities. Decide on a course of action for saving the lives of two goldfish whose very existence is threatened by the teacher. Establish a time limit for the activity.

Provide this bowl of goldfish with clean water and beautiful scenery. Plan the other goldfish bowl environment to be dirty and polluted. Place dirt, pebbles, and sand in- to this bowl along with small objects, such as a dirty nail. Inform the children that one set of goldfish is not as good as the other set of goldfish. The sets should, therefore, not be treated equally. Have the children react to this statement.

Have them suggest solutions for equalizing the two sets of goldfish.

Example:

Both sets of goldfish should be allowed to live in a happy and clean environment, so I think:

(1) We should move the first one out of the dirty environment into the clean environment.

(2) We should take the fish out of the dirty environment and make it clean. Then let them live in it again.

Record individual responses to the statement as well as solutions to the problem.

II. Factors which may change pre-judicial attitudes

A. Formal education

B. Personal experiences

C. Vicarious experiences

D. Personal associations with others

E. Spontaneous and impromptu experiences

II, A-E. Have a question board in the class. On the board mount questions which the children may have concerning inequalities. Allow a few minutes each day to answer or decide how to find the answer to some of the questions.

II, A-E. Use the following poem which deals with friendships among all children.

"Other Children"
by Helen Wing

(Adapted from The Golden Flute: An Anthology of Poetry for Young Children, selected by Alice Hubbard and Adline Babbitt, the John Day Co., New York)

Some children live in palaces
Behind an iron gate
And go to sleep in beds of gold
Whenever it gets late.

Some other children live in tents
With feathers all around
And take their naps in blankets
That are spread upon the ground.

And way up north the children live
In houses built of ice
And think that beds made out of fur
Are really very nice.

Some day I think I'll travel round
And visit every land
And learn to speak the language that
Each child can understand.

They'll teach me how to play their games
And, if they want me to
I'll show them different kinds of tricks
That I know how to do.

They'll want to ask me questions then
And I will ask them others
Until at last we understand
Like sisters and like brothers.

Have each child draw a large picture of a child from another country or of himself. Cut out the pictures and place them in an appropriate area. Arrange the pictures of all the children standing together and holding hands.

II, A-E. Read the poem, "Brothers" by Langston Hughes. (See resource)

We're related-you and I
You from the West Indies,
I from Kentucky.

Kinsmen-you and I,
You from Africa,
I from the U.S.A.

Brothers-you and I.

Use construction paper or blank white paper to cut out the large letters: B-R-O-T-H-E-R-S. Have the children use magazines and newspapers to select pictures which illustrate (continued) displays of brotherhood. Cut out these pictures, paste them around the letters, and display them for the entire school.

II,A-E. Teach the following song as a musical experience or use it as a poem. Before teaching the song, have the children participate in experiences which will help them to understand the concept of "together." Have the children do the following activities:

1. Sit together in a group and talk to each other quietly.
  2. Sit together in a circle and hold hands to play a game.
  3. Stand together and sing a song.
  4. Do an assignment together in small groups.
  5. Work together on a fun project, each helping the other.
- In teaching this song, be sure the children are together; they may be together in an organized group or together informally.

"Get Together"

Love is but the song we sing and fear's the way we die
You can make the mountains ring or make the angels cry
Know the dove is on the wing and you need know not why.

Come on people, now smile on your brother
Let's get together
Start to love one another right now.

Some will come and some will go and we shall surely pass
When the one who left us here returns for us at last
We are but a moment's sunlight fading in the grass
Come on people ...

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

We can love our brothers now
though they are black or white
We can love our brothers now
though they are yellow or red
It makes no difference what color he is just so a man's a man
Come on people...

If you've heard the song I sing
then you must understand
You hold the key to love and fear
all in your trembling hand.
One key unlocks them both you know and it's at your command
Come on people...

II, A-E. Use the poem, "An Itch" to display the concept of brotherhood in a simple manner.

"An Itch"
by Larry Kirkman

One day
I itched
On my back.

I couldn't reach it
I couldn't itch it

But my friend
Loved to scratch.

And he wrote his name
On my back
With his fingernails-

Teach the poem to the class and have the children give other examples of things which they might be unable to do without the help of their friends.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

The supportive learning activities for level I have been devised and selected by specialists in early childhood education for use in classrooms from kindergarten through the second grade. In devising these activities, the specialists have been keenly aware of all the dimensions of the child's world. First, they have considered the child himself as the center of the learning program. Then they have included the people, the places, the things, the experiences - both in school and out - that surround and influence the child.

These activities are intended as a supplement to those in the units preceding this section. Teachers are encouraged to use these activities in units or separately, according to their appropriateness. Some activities in this section can be substituted for other activities in the preceding units.

When using this material, the teacher will note that some activities described in level I - Early Childhood - may also be used in level II - Elementary. These activities may readily be adapted to the maturity level of the children, and the teacher should use them accordingly.

The check list that introduces the activities makes it easy for the teacher to check those she has used. A brief comment on the success of each activity with suggestions for improvement and/or variations will help to refine this guide to intergroup education.

TITLE

PURPOSE

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

1. ME, MYSELF, AND I
To express feelings children have about themselves and their situations

Shar poetry and other creative writings of children. The teacher may guide the children in their own creative writing by suggesting unfinished sentences such as, "I wish I were _____ because _____," or "If I lived in the city, I would _____," or "If I lived in the suburbs, I would _____."

Have the children create poems about themselves. Example:

"ME JIM"

Me Jim

Like to build blocks

Waiting for snacks

Play ball with Tim.

Children may also create simple songs and rhythms about themselves.

Make a video tape or movie of the creative stories, poems, songs, and rhythms written in the above activities. The children may recite and dramatize these stories and poems.

2. DO WHAT I DO

To develop a positive self-image by discovering that each person has things that he can do well

Have the children participate in various activities, such as skipping, hopping, jumping over an obstacle, catching or bouncing a ball, jumping rope, picking up a heavy object, drawing a designated object. The children decide which activities are difficult, which are easy. Bring out the fact that some activities are easy for some people, yet more difficult for others. Emphasize the idea that each person has things that he can do well.

3. HOW DOES OUR GARDEN GROW?

To appreciate the worth and dignity of each person

Have the children bring in photographs of themselves and help them cut out the portions of the photographs which show the head and shoulders. Have them cut out pictures of flowers from seed catalogues or gardening magazines and paste their pictures on the flower petals. Their names may be written on (continued)

PURPOSE

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

the flower petals. Each child may put his flower on the bulletin board under the title "Children's Garden."

4. FAMILY ROLES

To develop an appreciation for the interrelationship of families as they contribute to one's basic needs

Have the children role-play various members of the family. The class may plan a class-family picnic. Include parents in the planning. As a result of this activity, families may become acquainted and may visit each other.

5. I BELONG

To develop a feeling of "belonging" to the school and to the community

Have the children take walking trips around the school so that they will become familiar with the school and feel that they are an integral part of it. The children start a map of the school and expand it as they become familiar with places in the school. The children take walking trips into the community, make a map of the community, and expand it as trips are taken. Have the children show each other the locations of their home and the routes they use to come to school. The map may be duplicated so that each child has a copy for his use.

6. BUILDING A COMMUNITY

To develop an awareness of the feelings which people have about the place in which they live, and an understanding of these feelings

Have the class discuss the characteristics of a city or a town and plan a community. The children may collect pictures of buildings and homes, or they may design their own from various materials. Hollow or unit blocks may be used effectively for constructing a representation of a community. When the community is built, the children may discuss how they might feel about living in its different sections.

7. COME-CELEBRATE

To compare the holidays of various ethnic groups in order to develop a better understanding of the different cultures

Use Holidays Around the World to select holidays from several ethnic groups. Compare the ways in which holidays are celebrated. The class may select one of the holidays and plan to celebrate it.
Reference: Gaer, Joseph. Holidays Around the World

8. SYMBOLS

To show the universality of non-verbal communication

Find examples of various types of danger signals. Have the children discuss the meaning of the symbol. Have the children find other types of symbols and tell what the symbol means to them (e.g., poison labels). The children may create a class or school emblem and explain its meanings.

TITLE

Provide a learning station for which symbols can be made and have the children make these symbols. Include in the center examples of international road signs and have the children tell:

- What the symbol is-
- What it means-
- Where it may be found-
- How it may be used-

9. TIME LINE

To respect each other as individuals, to appreciate ethnic identity as a part of self-identity, and to understand that one's culture is that which he knows best

Have each child develop a time line in pictograph form and show noteworthy events which relate to the child's experiences within the school and the family. Divide the time line into the months of the year. Fill in birthdays, holidays, and special school or family events.

10. WHAT'S IN A NAME?

To trace origins of names as they reflect cultural influences

Using the names of the children in the class, compile a list of names, their meanings, and countries of origin. Examples: Jacques-John-French Juana-Jane-Spanish Paolo-Paul-Italian Stanislas-Stanley-Polish After reading Nu Dan and His Kite, by Jacqueline Ayer, or Gilberto and the Wind, by Marie Ets, find out what the names mean, their possible origins, their cognates in another language, and the origin of nicknames.

Have the children fold pieces of construction paper lengthwise and write foreign names in large double letters against the fold. Cut out the names without cutting them apart. Mount each design on contrasting colored paper. Children may add features and clothing which suggest how the person may look.

PURPOSE

11. DO YOU UNDERSTAND ME?

To develop a respect for various languages, and to recognize the universal use of some expressions

Learn simple words and phrases such as "Good Morning," "How are you," "My name is _____" in other languages.

My name is _____:

Je M'appelle _____ (French)

Me Llamo _____ (Spanish)

Thank you:

Arigato (Japanese)

Merci (French)

Grecias (Spanish)

Good Morning:

Bokar Tov (Hebrew)

Dobre Dehn (Russian)

Guten Morgen (German)

Learn a simple song in another language.

12. A PUPPET STORY

To develop a sensitivity to the feelings of another child who experiences rejection through prejudice

Read to the children the story Bright April. Have the class discuss the feelings of April, Phyllis, and Mother at different times in the story. The children may make and use puppets to dramatize the story for another class. Reference: DeAngeli, Marguerite. Bright April.

13. LET'S VISIT

To dispel prejudice through interaction with children in another school

Exchange visits with a class from another school. Have the children in both classes introduce themselves. Each class may present a short preplanned program which includes getting acquainted games. The children may exchange pictures and tapes. The host class may serve refreshments which the children have prepared.

Shafel, Fannie and George. People In Action. 1970. Holt, Rinehart, Winston, Inc, Subsidiary of Columbia Broadcasting System, 383 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10017.

Consists of a teacher's guide and a series (A-E) of spiral bound books of black and white photographs. Theory and methodology for the use of role-playing and discussion photographs are provided. The photographs are dramatic and realistic and present typical social situations and problems of urban living that arouse interest and curiosity. These photographs stimulate the children to speculate, to explain, to verbalize feelings, and to seek alternative ways to solve problems. This series is especially helpful with children who come from families where parents have had little time to spend with them.

New Perspectives in Intergroup Education

S E C T I O N   V I I

Level II - Teaching Units for Elementary

(Includes Supportive Learning
Activities and Selected Bibliography)

New Perspectives in Intergroup Education is presented in teaching units developed at four levels around four themes. Levels I and II appear in Volume I; Levels III and IV appear in Volume II.

The four themes provide the focus for the instructional objectives in each unit; the four levels provide the basis for the content, materials, types of learning activities, and assessment tasks. Each objective is followed by appropriate level content, learning activities, resource materials, and an assessment that will indicate mastery of the instructional objective by the learner.

Clearly, there will be some overlapping, but each objective relates directly to the theme and each component under an objective relates directly to that objective.

Level divisions move from the basic rudiments, Level I, of a theme to the more sophisticated and complicated elements in Level IV. Since teachers have a broad range of learners, the level divisions serve as a guide for the beginning of instruction. Assessment tasks will assist the teacher in determining the readiness of the learner for different levels. No one theme or level is mutually exclusive.

The theme and level divisions were designed to provide flexibility for the teacher in selecting appropriate level objectives for use with a selected group of learners.

Appropriateness was the single most important criterion on which the teaching units were designed. All elements of each unit were carefully screened and piloted to assure their appropriateness for each level.

Although the teaching units represent classroom piloted activities designed with carefully selected, available materials, new materials are continually being produced and published. Teachers should review new materials as they relate to a given instructional objective.

Teachers should compare their needs with the instructional objective and its content. The units are compatible with a broad range of subject matter areas. In fact, teachers in every discipline will find content which can be integrated into their ongoing classroom curriculum.

For example, if an elementary music lesson is primarily dealing with rhythm, the teacher can include ethnic dances to expand the perspective of the lesson. A biology lesson can have the added dimension of helping the learner accept every person as a human being and gain a positive self-image. The contributions of different ethnic groups to the development of mathematics add dimension to the study of that discipline.

Teachers should first select appropriate instructional objectives to which they can adapt the resources and learning activities. Next, they should select appropriate content, and, if necessary, modify the learning activities to reflect their needs.

Hopefully, these units will provide the beginnings for New Perspectives in Intergroup Education.

American society today is a pluralistic one made up of many ethnic and cultural groups which have contributed to our quality and strength. There has been a growing awareness of the values of diversity, and minorities are becoming more insistent on developing an identification and pride in their unique heritage. Despite these trends, there are blatant indications of prejudice and discrimination against "out groups," and even where no overt behavior is demonstrated, there is little or no evidence that man has become more sensitive and tolerant of human differences.

The overall development of a child's personality proceeds from himself outward toward family, neighbors, community, country, and the world. Therefore, it is important for a child to accept himself and to have pride in himself before he can accept others and their differences. When he sees ways in which all men satisfy their basic needs, he can perceive the commonality of all mankind. Then he can begin to appreciate the tremendous variety of cultures and understand the ways in which individuals and groups value their own lifestyle.

The extreme mobility of American society precludes an understanding and sensitivity to a variety of lifestyles, even though the child may grow up in a somewhat homogeneous community.

In his growth of understanding, the child must realize that prejudice exists between groups because of a lack of knowledge and contact between groups. In addition, he needs to learn the historic background of the pluralistic society that is American. In his unique position as an American, he becomes heir to the variety of cultural contributions of ethnic groups. Valuing each contribution, he should finally, learn to be an active participant in a democratic society.

In the first theme, the child proceeds from an examination and understanding of himself to acquiring sensitivity toward others, an awareness of the basic needs of all persons, and a knowledge of how these needs are met in various ways.

In the second theme, the child learns to recognize his own value structure, learns of other value structures, appreciates the contributions of all ethnic groups to the American society, and achieves pride in his own ethnic identity by knowing the contributions of his own group, as well as those of other peoples.

When the child is capable of learning about prejudice, he must accept the fact that he has prejudices and then learn to identify them. He then constructs a plan, however simple, to overcome his personal prejudice. He must be aware of the historic background of group prejudices and discrimination that led to the great disparities in American life.

The classroom must be a laboratory for the practice of democratic ideals. The experience which a child gains by participating in democratic procedures can be applied to more mature functioning in American society. Therefore, the children must learn to formulate rules and to abide by them; to cooperate in group activities, and to take part in group decisions - always retaining respect for individual needs and differences.

LEVEL II -- THEME I: FOUNDATIONS FOR EQUALITY: EQUAL WORTH OF EVERY PERSON

202

Instructional Objective 1: Given a variety of experiences, the learner will be able to demonstrate a positive self-image.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
Every person should be respected as a human being.	I. Use the following questionnaire as a pretest and a post-test of each learner's image. Personal inventory to be dittoed.	Caudill, Rebecca. Did You Carry the Flag, Charlie? New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., 1966. Bloch, Marie. Manyas . New York: Coward-McCann, 1957. Shotwell, Louisa. Roosevelt Grady . New York: Scholastic Book Services, 1970. Linski, Lois, Strawberry Girl. New York: J.B. Lippincott Co., 1945. Jackson, Jesse. Call Me Charley . New York: Harper and Row, Publishers, Inc., 1945. Bunch, Robert. Queenie Peavy . New York: Viking Press, 1966.	I. Have the learners demonstrate a positive self-image by again responding to the personal inventory. Return the first inventory. Have the learner compare the first inventory with the second. Have the learner discuss any changes with the teacher. Collect both sets for evaluation. II. Have each learner complete the following questionnaire to demonstrate his positive self-image. 1. What color looks best on me? 2. What styles are best for me? (for grades 4 and 5) 3. Do I feel good while speaking to my class? 4. What things do I like best about myself? 5. Do I like to work in groups? Why? 6. Do I think that I have improved any? Explain the response. 7. How can I make a plan to improve in the future?
I. Images of self and others	1. I like myself. 2. I am happy. 3. I like playing with other children. 4. I like school. 5. I like hobbies. 6. I enjoy sports. 7. I like to read. 8. I like having a very special friend. 9. I like to buy different foods. 10. I like making new friends. 11. I like my family. 12. I like summer vacation. 13. I like being myself. 14. I like the way other children dress. 15. I want other children to like me.

3. Mannerisms

CONTENT

Every person should be respected as a human being.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I,A,1,a,b. Present a list of common organs of the body. Ask the learners to name those other organs of the human body that they know. For example, the heart pumps the blood throughout the body. Encourage the learners to act out functions of the organs. Conclude that when the skin of our bodies is removed the basic healthy physiology of all mankind is identical.

I,A,2. Have each learner make a set of his own fingerprints. Use a dark magic marker, dab each finger with ink, and then press firmly on drawing paper. Mount each set of prints without identifying names on the drawing paper. Display on the bulletin boards. Then ask if the children have a way to identify their own prints. Point out the uniqueness of each set of prints.

I,A,3. Place a long mirror across several desks. Using tempera paint have a learner paint his portrait directly on the mirror. Other learners then take turns "trying on" the portrait. The paintings can be washed off so that other children may paint self-portraits.

I,A. Place oranges on the floor. Each learner is told to take an orange and observe it for details. After ten minutes ask the learners to put their oranges back and re-find their very own orange.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Lerner, Marguerite, M.D., Red Man, White Man, African Chief. New York: B'nai B'rith, 1967.

Showers, Paul. Your Skin and Mine. New York: Crowell Co., 1965.

Carlson, Natalie. The Empty Schoolhouse. New York: Harper and Row, 1965.

Brooks, Gwendolyn. Bronzeville Boys and Girls. New York: Harper and Row, 1965.

The Story of Skin Color. Tape. $7.95. 1974. Time: 8 min. Producer: Wollensak, Kunz, Inc., 207-209 E. Patapasco Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland 21225. Instructional Objective 1, Level II, Theme I, Content I,A.

ASSESSMENT TASK

III. Have each learner demonstrate a positive self-image by contributing to a class poem. The teacher gives the learner the following frame:

I seem to be _____,
but I really am _____.

After each learner has completed his lines, assemble them in blank verse form. Post on the bulletin board or duplicate and distribute for further discussion.

CONTENT

Every person should be respected as a human being.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

TEACHER:

I, A. Have the learner draw a picture of himself and his neighbors. Have the learner write four words on a paper that describe himself. Place the descriptions in a box. See if each child can identify the learner who is being described and have that child's picture shown and compared with the description.

I, A. Have each learner write his name on a slip of paper. Place the folded slips of paper in a box. Have the box juggled around so that the names become scrambled. Each learner picks a name and writes four words to describe each person. Then take turns reading descriptive words. See if the learners recognize themselves.

I, A. Choose pairs of learners to work together. Have them trace a complete outline of each other on plain wrapping paper. Each learner then colors his own portrait, cuts it out, staples it, and stuffs it with crumpled newspaper. Parents may be invited to identify the portraits.

I, A, 2, d. Collect data on the height and the weight of the learners. Construct bar graphs to compare the differences among learners.

"Harlem Sweeties"

Have you dug the spill
Of Sugar Hill?
Cast your gums
On this sepia thrill:
Brown sugar lassie,
Caramel treat,
Honey-gold baby
Sweet enough to eat.
Peach-skinned girlie,
Coffee and cream,
Chocolate darling
Out of a dream.
Walnut tinted
Or cocoa brown,
Pomegranate-lipped
Pride of the town.
Rich cream-colored.
To plum-tinted black,
Feminine sweetness
In Harlem's no lack.
Glow of the Quince
To blush of the rose.
Persimmon bronze
To cinnamon toes.
Blackberry cordial,
Virginia Dare wine-
All those sweet colors
Flavor Harlem of mine!

Delicious fine Sugar Hill.

TEACHER:

I, A, 2. Have the learners choose a partner. Ask the learners in each group to list the following:

1. Differences which I try to hide between myself and others
2. Differences which I sometimes laugh at between myself and others.

If the children wish, have them share their inventories.

Follow-up discussion: Discuss the following question with the learners. About what things do people get teased?

TEACHER:

I, A, 3, a. Display on the bulletin board pictures which depict hair styles and good grooming techniques. Use pictures of various ethnic groups. Keep a large mirror in the classroom for the learners to look at themselves and to examine their appearance.

CONTENT

Every person should be respected as a human being.

II. Peer groups

A. Acceptance

B. Rejection

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, B. See the film - "People Are Like Rainbows." Discuss the film and relate it to the learners in the class.

TEACHER:

II, A. Collect a wire coat hanger for each learner. Attach several long pieces of yarn to each hanger. Staple the learner's name at the top of each hanger. Use affectionate nicknames, if the child desires one. Explain carefully to the class that they may add a positive statement about any classmate and staple it on one of the pieces of yarn on that person's hanger. Display the hangers by hanging them from lights or from the ceiling.

II, A. Make costumes depicting the person whom the learner most admires. Discuss the reasons for the selection of the person.

II, B. Read aloud "The Ugly Duckling" by Hans Christian Anderson. Discuss the idea of acceptance and rejection and the feelings of people in both roles. Strive to focus the discussion on peer acceptance. Allow the learners to work in small groups, have them rewrite the story, and illustrate it as a comic strip. (Older learners might make a U-Film filmstrip.)

ASSESSMENT TASK

TEACHER:

- I, II. Have the learners analyze three poems dealing with these themes: mother-son relationships, self-image, and poverty. Focus the discussion on the mood and symbolism of the poems.
  - "Mother to Son" - Hughes
  - "Taught me Purple" - Hughes
  - "We Wear the Mask" - Dunbar
  - "Nancy Hanks" - Benet
  - "Midway" - Madgett
  - "The Still Voice of Harlem" - Hughes
  - "The Negro Speaks of Rivers" - Hughes

TEACHER:

- I, II. Have the learners write, illustrate, and bind a book of the chants which they use in their neighborhood games. Present the book to a class of younger children; teach them one of the games and its chant.

- I, II. Use sculpturing as a means to express emotions. Make a mixture of 2/3 parts of vermiculate or zonolite, 1/3 part of plaster of Paris and enough water to make the consistency of thick mud. Pour into clean milk cartons. Next day, have the learners peel off the milk cartons and carve an object using dull instruments. Have the learners describe and compare their carvings, emphasizing the emotions shown. Arrange a display in an appropriate area.

I, II. Have each learner identify the personal differences and the sensitivities of the people in these open-ended stories and demonstrate how he would treat each person as an individual.

Mary Lou is a new girl in your class who talks "funny." The other children make fun of her accent. One morning she came to school and you said, "_____."

Jose's grandmother and grandfather live with his family. Sometimes his grandmother is cranky. His grandfather hates noise and takes a nap in the afternoon. Jose's best friend, John, wants to visit after school. Jose is ashamed to have John visit. What would you tell Jose to do?

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

TEACHER:

I, II. Ask the learners if they ever need to "get away from it all?" Explain that all people need to have time for self-reflection and that children are no different in their need for privacy at times. Then discuss some general topics which could be used for writing a poem, such as people, anger, dignity, sorrow, affection, babies, brotherhood, strange dreams, a perfect world, a perfect day, friends, or personal feelings. Read a few short poems aloud; e.g., "Dream Dust" or "Dreams" by Langston Hughes or, perhaps, even the words to a currently popular song. Have the group compose a few simple verses. Next, involve the children in a 20-minute "all alone" period. Let the children go to any corner, into the hall, or even outside, if feasible, to create their own poem. Request them to spend ten minutes in writing their poems. After the poems are written, share them orally and display them in an appropriate place.

1. What is trust?
2. What is self-respect?
3. Are these two concepts related? How?
4. Do people feel good when someone trusts and respects them?

Finish the following stories as they relate to self-respect and trust:

1. You have your lunch money on your desk. Several people are standing around your desk. When they leave, you cannot find your money.
2. You are standing on the playground. A girl comes up to you and says, "How about playing with us?"
3. You have a fight with a friend. He says, "I don't want you for a friend anymore."

Have the learners write a story about:

- "What I like about myself"
 and
 "What I do not like about myself"

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

Every person needs to develop a positive self-image.

II. Read the story: "The Empty Schoolhouse." Use the idea of "put yourself in the other person's place" as a role-playing activity. Become the characters in the story. Discuss the feelings and emotions of the character in the story. Write a story about how you would feel if you were one of the characters in the story.

II, B, 3, d. Part I. Learn how to say the word "friend" in as many languages as possible. For example:

Ami - French
Amicus - Latin
Freund - German
Freund - Yiddish
Vriend - Dutch
Gospodeen - Russian
Amico - Italian
Chkovar - Hebrew
Aikooso - Greek

TEACHER:

Part II. Have the children make a list of the attributes of a good friend. Discuss these attributes and create pantomimes to express each attribute, using the word "friend" in as many languages, colors, and types of printing or script as possible. Design posters. Tissue collage can be used to enhance this activity. Have the children share their posters and display them appropriately.

TEACHER:

I, II. Working in small groups, have the children create pantomimes illustrating the following qualities: strength, honesty, courage, talent, athletic ability, scholastic ability, friendship, conscientiousness, or loyalty. Use these as a guessing game or for competition. Then refine the pantomimes and, using current records, dance them to appropriate music. Next, use the negative list of attributes and have the children find appropriate music for these: weakness, fear, dishonesty, treachery, irresponsibility, hostility, lack of self-control, selfishness, meanness, or cowardice. After the refinement of the positive and negative attribute pantomimes, have the children create their own dances, using the records they have chosen. Try to create a real plot and tell a whole story in interpretative dance form.

Research and discuss the works of Charles White, a contemporary black artist. Locate and discuss books containing the work of Charles White. Draw a picture of a man or woman in deep thought. Use dark crayon on neutral construction paper and chalk to portray highlights. Bring pictures from magazines, such as Ebony, Ladies Home Journal, or McCall's, which show a person of great dignity. How would you show dignity in a picture? Use the pictures to make a display.

TEACHER:

Make a transparency of the basic outline of the human face. Have overlays for learners to draw features that show dignity. Discuss the role which dignity plays in a positive self-image.

Write a poem about one of the subjects in Charles White's works. Use dignity or strength as your theme. Create an interpretive dance to show dignity, pain, or sorrow.

Play spirituals sung by Marion Anderson or Mahalia Jackson. Discuss the ways in which spirituals show human dignity.

"What Is an American?"

Two hundred years ago a Frenchman named J. Hector St. John de Crevecoeur came to live in this country. This Frenchman wrote an essay entitled, "What Is an American?" in which he discussed what he considered some of the basic characteristics of the Americans. He described Americans as restless and mobile, born organizers, good law-makers, rebels, non-conformists, and inventors.

1. What does the word characteristic mean?
2. J. Hector St. John de Crevecoeur was speaking about Americans of 200 years ago. Do you think he would describe Americans the same way today?
3. How would you answer the question, "What is an American?"
4. Can you think of any American now or in past history who generally fits de Crevecoeur's description?
5. Do you fit this description?
6. Are you different from all other people? Explain.
7. Should each person be different from all other people? Should he always be different from others? Explain.
8. Does the fact that de Crevecoeur used many different words to describe Americans give you any clues about the differences in people? Explain.

(This activity can lead into a discussion of the meaning of individuality and conformity.)

Instructional Objective 3: Given a definition of basic human needs, the learner will be able to identify the basic needs of human beings.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
Every human being has the same basic needs.	TEACHER: I. Ask the learners to respond to the question: What do people need in order to live happily and successfully? (Such responses as love, food, clothing, shelter, health, security, and safety, will probably be given.) Have the learners list the needs and then rate them according to priorities. Discuss these needs as the basic human needs of man. Ask the learners if these needs would change if they lived some other place in the world. Help the learners to discover that there are universal needs that must be satisfied in order to maintain life. Have the learners cut out pictures of people from around the world. (These pictures should depict people who are meeting their needs. Old National Geographic magazines are one source of pictures.) ### TEACHER:

I, B: Have each learner draw a map and write a story about a "dream place." Have each learner then explain what makes the place desirable and attractive. Use the maps and stories for a bulletin board display entitled, "Have Fantasy: Will Travel."

Have the learners locate and compile information about the customs of Maryland, Woodland Indian Tribes: Nanticoke, Piscataway, Patuxent, Susquehannock. Make a chart depicting the Indian customs which have been adopted by other Americans. Find out how the Indians preserved their meat. Compare these methods with the modern methods for preserving meat. Locate examples of Indian design in modern clothing. Make examples of Indian designs which use vegetable print. Make coil pottery.

Using ceramic clay, make coils by rolling clay on a flat surface. When the coil is about 12 inches long, start to form the bottom of a vessel by making concentric coils of clay lying flat. Then build up the sides with rows of coils. Smooth the interior and exterior surfaces with wet hands. Allow the pots to dry for one week. Research authentic Indian designs and decorate vessels using tempera paint. When dry, shellac over the surfaces. The pots may be decorated with ceramic glaze and then fired in a kiln, but it will be difficult to reproduce authentic Indian designs unless the glaze is very thick. This activity may be combined with a trip to the Smithsonian American Indian exhibit or to other American Indian Museums.

Classify a drum according to the ways in which different social groups use it. Show a drum and have the learners answer questions, such as "How would an African or an Indian use a drum? What would your mother do with the drum? How would you use a drum?" The learners may examine a square of white cloth to determine the number of different ways in which they might use it. The learners may also examine and discuss the use of other objects, such as the bow and arrow and a piece of rope.

TEACHER:

II, A. Display pictures of the human body in various states of health: normal, under-weight, over-weight, or diseased. Lead the learners to discuss: (1) How does the human body maintain a balanced state of health? (2) How does severe imbalance in the body cause death? Apply the learnings to future discussions of basic human needs.

II, B. Compose "Who Am I?" sentences to give oral clues to occupations. Pantomime such occupations as farmer, doctor, teacher, businessman. Include occupations representative of the community. Discuss the qualities which these people needed in order to attain their positions. Emphasize the need for abilities, hard work, goals, involvement, and recognition.

II. Invite a parent who has an interesting occupation to visit the class. Prepare questions concerning the educational and physical requirements and the emotional and financial rewards of the parent's field.

Have each learner choose one slip of paper from each box and write a story concerning the four elements he chose from each box. After the learner has written the story, have him share it with the class. Use the story as a basis of discussion about the aspects of productive living.

The following are examples of plots to be written on slips of paper:

Ability box - mechanical, artistic, athletic, mathematical

Goal box - make a large amount of money, be happy and content, travel extensively, have a good job

Problem box - lazy, poor, ugly, unskilled

Scene box - a city ghetto, a suburb, a farm, a coal mining town

- I. Have the learners research the cultures of the Hopi, Pima, or Sioux Indians or the Kpelle, Yourba, or Masai tribes of Africa. Make a salt and flour relief topographical map, scene, or aerial view of the area and culture studied.

Supplies:

1. Combine three parts of salt with one part of flour and enough water to bring the solution to the consistency of dough. This will create a mass which is suitable for sculptural modeling; the thickness may be modified for individual needs by varying the quantity of water.
2. Heavy cardboard or piece of wood
3. Water color paints
4. Brush
5. Water container

Procedures:

1. Cover the cardboard or wood with a thin film of salt and flour mixture.
2. Keeping a design in mind, create a semi-round relief, building up masses of the salt and flour mixture to various heights. Additional salt and flour may be added when the first application has dried enough to support another layer.
3. When the modeling is completed, it may be embellished by the addition of color while still moist.

I, A, 2. Imagine that the island shown on the map has just been discovered. No one lives there. You may develop the island country in any way that you think best.

Decide where the country will be located and designate the latitude and longitude. Will the country be large - perhaps one inch per 500 miles? or small - one inch per 50 miles? Next, the borders: Is it going to be inland, or an island, or half-and half, like a coastal country?

Using the map symbols, fill in the physical features - forests, mountains, rivers that would be found in the make-believe country. These features, as well as the location on the globe, should give some idea of the weather found there. Add any new symbols which you need. What resources would be located there? Before adding resource symbols, decide where fertile soil and water power would be located. Could the country survive on gold alone?

Where will you locate your cities? What kinds of cities spring up in certain places? Where is the country's capital? Draw and label the kinds of transportation and the routes. Keep in mind ways of getting goods out of the country and into the country. The choice of resources should give you ideas about imports and exports. (See attached samples for symbols and map.)

TEACHER:

I. Have the learners bring to the class labels from canned and frozen foods and advertisements of manufactured goods. Discuss such questions as, "Which of these products are familiar to you? How does the availability of these products affect your lives?" Compare the life of the early American colonists with that of present-day Americans. Have the children write a story about ways in which a family might react if they found themselves in situations such as being stranded in a storm, being forced to land on an uninhabited island, or being grounded on a sand bar.

I, B. Make a parallel study of the migration of many groups to the United States. Make a chart showing the places they settled in the United States and the reasons for their choice of a particular place. Note also the names of famous people in each group.

TEACHER:

II. Divide a large bulletin board into four sections. Mount pictures depicting each of the four aspects of adaptation:

A. Sanitation

transportation, settlements, technology, economics. Taking each section separately,

B. Beautification

help the class to observe the interdependence of the four aspects of adaptation to the environment shown in the picture.

C. Protection

Choose an unusual environment like the arctic region. Draw pictures of dog sleds and airplanes. Explain why trucks and cars would not be a suitable means of transportation in that particular region.

D. Vandalism

II. Write an ending to this story:
We have run out of gasoline for automobiles, trucks, airplanes, buses, and motorcycles. This has happened right now; today, we are in the midst of this crisis. What happens now? What shall we do tomorrow and from now on? Draw a picture to illustrate the story solution.

TEACHER:

II. Invite resource people to explain and discuss the factors which determine the value of land in their area. A resource person might be a real estate agent, a city planner, or a representative of the Department of Parks and Recreation. Guide questions for the class to ask the speaker:
1. What is the cost per acre of land in the inner city? The edge of the city? The suburbs? Farm areas nearby? Why?
2. What is the cost of buying and developing land into a city park?
3. What are the taxes per acre of land in the city? The suburbs? Farm area? Why?

TEACHER:

III. Have the learners write a chart story about a Navajo boy or girl. Make a class filmstrip, using felt tip coloring pens. Use the class story as the narration and present the production to another class. The teacher may adapt this activity to any culture studied. Check with the media specialist for the purchase of filmstrip.

TEACHER:

III. Inquire if any learner has had the experience of moving to a different place and of finding that the way he spoke, did something, or wore his clothing was different from the ways of most people who lived there. Ask, "What made you aware of the differences? Was it because others questioned you, laughed at you, or told you that you were wrong? What was your reaction? How did you feel? What did you do? What did your parents advise you to do? Suppose one of those children had moved to the place where you came from, would there have been the same reaction to the different ways of the stranger?" (Almost every child has experienced this "feeling different" in some way, because of family customs, religion, socio-economic levels, national heritage, or local school systems. It will be valuable for the pupils to realize that nearly everyone has such experiences at some time in his life.)

B. Folkways, mores, customs

1. Goodluck charms
2. Protection for charms
3. Candles or lights
4. Masks
5. Superstitions
6. Religions

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

IV. Familiarize yourselves with the steps and perform in groups such dances as: Czech Polka, Israeli Hora, Mexican Hat Dance, Greek-line Dance, Hawaiian Hand Motions.

Use recorded authentic native music as accompaniment. Teach any other ethnic dances you know to the class.

IV. Listen to records of short selections of various kinds of music, Examples:

African	Vietnamese	Jewish
Chinese	East Indian	South American

Explain from which ethnic group the music comes and how the music makes you feel. Clap or move in spontaneous dance to the rhythm and mood of the music. Use rhythm instruments. Sing along with the voices on the record to capture the mood of the music and to appreciate the techniques involved.

IV. Dramatize the repetitive movements of groups working together and sing the songs which have their origins in such activities. Example: Sea Chantey - (hauling the sails)

"Blow the Man Down"

Making Music Your Own - Book 5

Railroad song - (driving spikes, laying ties)
 "Drill Ye Tarriers"

ASSESSMENT TASK

Ethnocentrism causes most people to view the world as if their way is the right and natural way and their values the true values.

I. Establishment of value structure

A. Family

1. Ethnic heritage
2. Racial heritage
3. Religious heritage

B. Neighborhood

C. Region

D. Newspapers

1. Ethnic
2. Local
3. National

E. Magazines

1. Ethnic
2. National
3. Occupational

F. Radio

G. Television

I, A, B. Choose a partner with whom to work. Name all the members of your family; describe your neighborhood, your favorite toys, holidays, and friends. Each partner then makes an individual mural showing your family and friends celebrating your favorite holiday. Compare your own mural with your friend's mural. In what ways are they alike? In what ways are they different?

I, A. Respond to the following sentences:

1. Besides being an American, I am
  2. Something special about my family is
  3. Something special about my culture is
- Share your answers with your class.

I, A. Create Bill Somebody by using the following diagram. Give Bill Somebody ideas that you feel would make him a nice person to have as a friend. Write his ideas in his head. Dress him in clothes. Give him some friends.

The teacher reads a story which relates one version as told in Africa, one version as told in Asia, and one version as told in Northern Europe. Have the learners state where each version is told and explain how each group views the world according to his own values.

The Story:

Long ago when the world was young and the great Spirit was fashioning mankind, he molded some figures of clay and put them into the great oven to bake....

First Version:

First, he baked them too slowly and they were too white. Then he burned a batch and they were too black. Some were baked just long enough so they came out perfectly golden yellow. (Answer-Asia)

TEACHER:

I, A, B, C. Part I. Prior to the lesson, construct a large flower on the board with moveable parts. Have at least six leaves for your flower. On each leaf print six of the twelve factors that members of your class find important for establishing values. These factors are family, neighborhood, region, newspapers, radio, music, books, and television. Do this prior to the lesson.

Write the word value on the chalkboard. Lead the children in a brainstorming session during which they give words or phrases to explain value.

As the children respond, relate their responses, where appropriate, to the six printed leaves that you have selected. Attach them to the stem of the flowers as the discussion progresses. Summarize by pointing out that these are factors which help us to establish our values. Together with the class, compose a statement to summarize the meaning of value.

- 1 green pepper
- 1 tomato
- 1/2 tsp. of parsley
- 1/2 tsp. of oregano
- 4 t. tomato sauce
- 3 t. oil
- 1/2 t. salt

Add and saute' a few minutes longer:

- 2 c. rice
  - 1 can red kidney beans
- Add just enough water to cover, bring to a boil, and cook until most of the water has evaporated. Stir, cover, reduce flame to very low, and cook for about 35 minutes.

Place the bag over your head as a mask; walk around among your classmates and try to find a friend who has some of the same words written on his mask. (When you view the world through your own preferences, as you do wearing this mask, you are being ethnocentric and allowing bias to determine your actions. Everyone is ethnocentric, but the more mature you are and the more you learn about all people, the less ethnocentric and biased you become.)

Explain to the students that in the past many towns were divided (as in the diagram). In order to learn from people of different ethnic backgrounds and to share ideas, we need to be exposed to different people.

Have the students discuss how children from each school can share ideas while considering the prevailing housing patterns of most Maryland counties. Why do you think some people do not want to live in communities where people of different ethnic groups reside?

II.C. Read and consider how to solve these problems.

1. You own 100 acres of land and you want to make a large sum of money. There are no people for hire. How would you find the labor (people) to plant and harvest a profitable crop?
2. You own several old apartment houses in the city. You pay a high tax on these houses. You want to make a large amount of money. How can you increase your earnings?
3. You are a small farmer living on the edge of the wilderness. Your oldest son is getting married and will need a farm of his own. Indians hunt in the woods nearby, but they don't plant or farm. What would you do?

TEACHER:

After the learners have responded to the above situations, have the class compare these hypothetical situations to those of the plantation owners of the 18th century who resorted to slavery, to the slum landlords of today, or to the frontier farmer of the 18th century. Attempt to develop the idea that the owner's values affect their actions. Relate these activities to the frontier expression, "The only good Indian is a dead Indian."

- A. Folkways
- B. Music
- C. Art
- D. Architecture
- E. Food
- F. Dance
- G. Games
- H. History
- I. Languages
- J. Others

I. list your hobbies, interests, family members, and at least one special family folkway or custom. Cut out a ring of colored paper approximately 12 inches in diameter and three inches wide. Mark off the circle into sections representing the customs on each child's personal list. Find magazine illustrations to paste on the ring in order to illustrate the customs and traits. If magazine illustrations are not available, draw pictures. When you have completed the ethnocentric circle, form groups to find customs which match those of another child. Wherever a custom matches, cut out one matching edge of the ring and mount the customs next to each other on a large bulletin board. This forms a three dimensional design. Attach every ring in the class in an attractive design. (Point out that this is a graphic representation of the concept of ethnicity and inter-twining of all customs into the "cultural mosaic" of the community or the United States.) Following this activity, discuss ethnocentrism and its meaning to the community.

Make African drums by collecting large coffee cans, sheets of leather-like plastic, and strong cord. Decorate the side of the coffee can in an African motif prior to stretching the leather over each end. Open both ends of the coffee can. Cut out enough "leather" to cover each end. Stretch the pieces.

I, II. Discuss and list your attributes (racial and ethnic)-favorite foods, musical preferences, favorite movies, books, and personal heroes. Using construction paper, mark an outline (six-sided) for constructing a cube approximately four inches square. Use magazines and newspapers to find examples of the attributes and interests listed. Find words to express the ideas. Paste them in overlapping montage fashion on cube sides as follows:

- Side 1 - music preferences
- Side 2 - favorite foods
- Side 3 - racial type
- Side 4 - words to express thoughts and ideas
- Side 5 - favorite movies and books
- Side 6 - heroes-sports, political party

After all six sides are mounted, form into a cube and tape the sides together. Play a game of identifying and matching each learner with his cube. Suspend the cubes on a thread in an appropriate location.

TEACHER:

I, B. Teach "Pick a Bale of Cotton," a work song that can be sung progressively faster and faster. (p. 54) - American Favorite Ballads, Seeger.) It can also be used as a song for active participation and rhythmic clapping.

I, A. Make an "Eye of God," (Ojos de Dios) Mexican folk art style. The materials needed are yarn, sticks, and glue. Make the traditional kind by forming a cross with two sticks of equal length and by winding yarn around it as shown in this diagram.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Start at the center and loop the yarn around each spoke, always in the same direction. The sticks can range in size from a few inches to several feet. From tooth picks and Q-tips, make tiny pulls for window shades. Use tree branches or ice cream sticks and bamboo strips to make exotic wall decorations.

TEACHER:

Contact the local high school to secure the service of a third or fourth year language student who is willing to spend about 20 minutes several times a week teaching elementary students a basic introduction to any foreign language. If possible, have the student use filmstrips and other media materials to enrich the curriculum.

(Contact Miss Ann Beusch, Specialist in Foreign Languages, Maryland State Department of Education, for resource speakers from Brazil or American students who have visited Brazil.)

II. Keep a diary as if you are a Mexican American living in Santa Fe, New Mexico, in the year 1836. Answer the questions: What is your opinion of the Mexican Government? Of the U.S. Government? Of the Texas Republic? Give sufficient justification to support your opinion.

II. Pretend you are gold seekers following the trail to California. What people do you meet? What do you find? Do you stay in California? Do you find gold? Where? Do you start a business? Relate your experiences to the class in an interesting manner.

II. Pretend you are sailing with your family from Ireland to Boston because of the famine. You arrive in Boston, repack, and go to Independence, Missouri. Now join a train of wagons going west on the Oregon Trail. Discuss the trip, the land, the Indians, and the people in the wagon train with you. Are there any blacks? Do you have problems because you are Irish? Why or why not?

II. Pretend that you are an Indian boy or girl living in Oregon. Tell about the wagons which go past your home. How do you feel? What does your father say about them? Does your mother allow you to play with the settler's children?

II. Choose a historic period or a current event previously studied and compose a newspaper reporting the facts. Then deliberately try to report the events in favor of a particular ethnic group.

Example: Write news articles reporting the establishment of Daniel Boone's settlement. Then re-write the articles as they might have been reported in an Indian newspaper.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

II. Example: Write news articles reporting Custer's last stand from the point of view of an American Indian reporter; then form the point of view of a white reporter traveling with General Custer.

TEACHER:

II. Discuss the use of slang or "private language" in various situations between contemporaries. Point out that slang is a kind of informal language that many people use when talking to their friends but is not usually used with people who do not understand it. Describe a situation in which there is dialogue between two people. Then request the learners to create a cartoon or comic strip by filling the "dialogue balloons" first with slang and then with the translation into standard English. Discuss the appropriate use of each type of communication. Follow this activity with research concerning the inclusion of previously slang expressions into daily standard language. For example: kick the bucket, bus, beat it, rubberneck, skyscraper, jazz, bulldozer, jerk, hayseed, funk, cool, mob, goon, kibitzer, jive, right on, rip off, bread, threads. Point out that American English is enriched by colorful expressions contributed by many different ethnic groups. Street signs may also be researched to determine the origin of the names.

TEACHER:

Teach this Indian dance. After the children have learned the steps, allow them to perform the dance in a circle formation. The teacher can help the children keep time by beating out the rhythm on a tom-tom. Some of the children may wish to play the simple rhythms on the drums which they made.

1. Drumbeat: LOUD, soft, LOUD, soft
Dance Step: Shift the weight of the body to one foot while advancing the other so that the heel is lifted and the toe touches the ground. Bring the heel down sharply. Repeat these movements with the other foot. The toe is brought down on the LOUD drumbeat and the heel on the soft one. The step may be done to a fast or slow tempo.

2. Drumbeat: LOUD, soft, LOUD, soft
Dance Step: This step is exactly the opposite of Step Number 1. Raise the foot from two-to-eight inches from the ground. Bring the heel down sharply, the toe following.
3. Drumbeat: LOUD, soft, LOUD, soft
Dance Step: This is a skipping step with a double hop on each foot. The movement is on the ball of the foot. The heel does not touch the ground. Knees are lifted fairly high.

II. Question the learners concerning how they think the many Indian tribes who lived in the Western Plains were able to communicate with a tribe which spoke a different language? When sign language is offered as a method of communication, inform the class that they are going to learn some Indian sign language. Use references to teach some basic sign language. Allow a group of learners to tell a story about Indian culture using sign language.

Examples: MAN - hold your hand pointing up in front of your chin

WOMAN - pretend to comb your hair with curved fingers from the top of your head to your shoulder

I (ME) - point to yourself with your thumb

YOU - point to the person with your index finger

I-XI. Research the life of one person on the list. Draw a picture of the pers. You selected on a poster board or tagboard. On the back of the poster, write a brief report. Cut the picture into jig-saw pieces. Ask a friend to assemble the puzzle and read the report.

H. Alexander Archipenko

I-XI. Research the life of one person on the list. Make a filmstrip showing highlights of his or her life. Use U-Film and colored grease pencils. Make a tape to go with your filmstrip and share it with your class.

J. Korczak

Ziolkowski

K. Norman Rockwell

I-XI. Research the life of one person on the list. Make a mural or poster showing scenes from your person's life.

IV. Music

A. Arturo Toscanini

I-XI. Research the life of one person on the list. Draw a true life comic strip about the person whom you studied. Use magic marker and comic strip form.

B. W. C. Handy

I-XI. Develop a time line showing noteworthy events or outstanding contributions of Americans from minority groups. A specific time period may be used. Discuss the implications of the time line in a pluralistic society.

E. Marian Anderson

TEACHER:

Have the learner design and construct a diorama that depicts an important event in the life of one of the great Americans studied. Omit the person's name from the diorama. The learner will describe the event to the class. The learners should then write the name of the person whom they feel that the diorama describes.

I-XI. Pretend you are the mother or father of the famous contributor whom you researched. Tell your friends how proud you are of the person and indicate how you helped him or her become a contributor to America. What traits helped to make the person successful?

I-XI. Read about a contributor. Dress up to look like the person and tell about yourself.

TEACHER:

I-XI. Have all the learners dress in costumes of famous Americans about whom they have read. Hold a discussion on the topic, "America is a land of opportunity for minority people." Have each person respond to the above statement just as his or her character would have responded. Use quotes from an authentic source to justify the opinion.

I XI. Read a book about one of the people on the list. Make a sock puppet to resemble that person. Next, use construction paper to make a book jacket; fold it into the shape of a book jacket and print the title and author of the book on the cover. Write a few short sentences about the book and paste them on the flyleaf. Finally, mount your sock puppet head inside the folded book jacket and post it on the bulletin board.

1. Inheritance
2. Tradition
3. Religion
4. Language

B. Life style

1. Home
2. Neighborhood
3. Locale
4. Occupation

II. The cultural mosaic

A. Brotherhood

B. Americanism

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, A, B. Imagine that your ethnic group is unknown to most of the people in your community or that it suffers from a poor image. Construct a poster that accurately points out the contributions and strengths of your ethnic group. Make sure that your poster "sells" your ethnicity.

I, A, B. Plan and arrange an ethnic fair showing the contributions of different ethnic groups to the American culture. Bring contributions from your own ethnic group. Explain to the class the various contributions of your ethnic group.

I, A, B. Make a family coat of arms in the shape of a shield. Use symbols for your parent's occupations, your style of house, religion, language, locale, and ethnic group. Color the shield. Show your coat of arms to the class, and explain the meaning of the symbols.

I, A. Invite grandparents or other relatives to discuss their ethnic background or culture. Prepare questions to ask.

ASSESSMENT TASK

Pride in one's self as a part of ethnic identity is valuable and contributes to the fully functioning individual in the American mosaic.

- I, B. Imagine that you are an inanimate object in your home. Pretend the object has come to life. Recount what would happen if you were that object for a day in your immediate neighborhood. Use the following as examples:
1. Furniture found in your home
  2. Clothing found in your home
  3. Family means of transportation

TEACHER: Duplicate the American Mosaic puzzle for the learners to complete. The learners may add other ethnic groups wherever possible, if they choose.

I, I. Write a poem with the title "I Am Proud To Be _____." Read your poem to the class.

TEACHER: I, I. Mount a large construction paper replica of the American flag on the bulletin board. Run a weekly contest for the best ethnically centered biography. Post the winning biography over a star. Using a sentence strip, print the ethnic origin of the subject. Place the sentence strip on a stripe of the flag.

- II. Design one large poster, together with the other learners, that depicts pride in the American mosaic.
- II. Play the song, "I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing" and discuss the lyrics.

Pride in one's self as a part of ethnic identity is valuable and contributes to the fully functioning individual in the American mosaic.

II. Trace your hand on construction paper. Choose a color that most nearly resembles the color of your skin. Trace part of the forearm, also. Cut it out. On one side of the hand, write rules for friendship and brotherhood. Find someone with a hand of another color; talk to that person, and get to know him. Mount pairs of hands to appear as if they are shaking hands in greeting.

II, B. Play spelling arithmetic with American themes. For example:

1. Take the year Columbus landed in America - 1492
Divide by a third of a dozen Indians who saw him. 373
Subtract by the number of days in a leap year. 7
Multiply by the number of ships in Columbus' fleet. 21
Add the number of hours in a day. 24
total 45

2. Take the number of states in the United States. 50
Multiply by the number of colors in our flag. 150
Divide by two states. 75
Subtract the Carolinas and Dakotas. 71
Add the Virginias. 2
total 73

3. Take the year of the Declaration of Independence. 1776
Divide by the President and Vice President. 888
Add the original thirteen colonies. 901
Subtract all the states. 851
Multiply by all the "New" states (New Mexico, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York) 4
total 3404

LEVEL II -- THEME III: BARRIERS TO EQUALITY: PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION

Instructional Objective 1: Given a definition of prejudice, the learner will be able to identify his own prejudices and to construct a plan which will help him to understand and change them.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
Every person is prejudiced in some way.	TEACHER: I, IV. Make a transparency of the picture (figure A). Ask four learners to leave the room. Using the overhead projector, show the transparency to the remainder of the class. Ask the learners to observe it carefully, but to make no comments. After three minutes, turn off the projector, and request one of the learners to return to the room. Have him ask questions about the picture which the class saw in his absence. Try to get every learner to contribute something to the description. Do not add or elicit any response from the learners. Then have the second learner return to the class; have the first learner describe the picture again. Discuss the responses and point out any changes in the story or any transference of feelings about the racial groups involved in the fight. Watch for any projection of feelings and assumptions about race, motives, and circumstances about the fight and discuss these thoroughly with the learners. Ask the learners, "What conclusions can you draw from this experience which will help you understand and control your prejudices?"	Baum, Betty. Patricia Crosses Town. New York: Knopf, 1965. Instructional Objective 1, Theme III, Level II, Content I, II, III, IV.	Have each learner construct a plan which will help him to overcome his prejudices. The plan will include the following questions to be answered orally or in written form: 1. Why do you want to play with some children and not with others? 2. What makes you like or dislike a person? 3. Why do you like to go with one special person more often than with others? 4. State your personal prejudice problem in one sentence. 5. What are some things about you that cannot be changed? 6. What are some things about you that can be changed? 7. How can you work to change your attitudes, if you feel they need changing? 8. Write the solution that you think is best for you.

TEACHER:

(Note: Uglifruit is in season from April-June)

II, A. Purchase uglifruit (a cross between a grapefruit and an orange). Make sure that you purchase enough fruit for each learner to have a section to taste.

Place the words ugli fruit on the board. Ask the children to speculate what the fruit might look like before they see it. Ask the learners to write what they think the fruit might taste like. Discuss the replies. Then distribute a section of the fruit to each learner. After the learners taste the fruit, ask them to write how they feel about the fruit. Compare the two responses. Discuss the meaning of prejudice to summarize this activity.

TEACHER:

II, III. Read aloud "The Blind Men and the Elephant" to the learners. Have the learners define prejudice in their own words. Then develop the concept of prejudice as judgement with an incomplete set of facts.

Duplicate the poem and distribute a copy to each learner. Have a learner re-read the poem aloud while others follow along silently. Discuss the meaning of the poem. Call attention to the next to the last verse, to the lines. "Though each was partly in the right, And all were in the wrong....."

Every person is prejudiced in some way.

4. Examining one's own reactions to the strange and unknown
5. "Standing in the shoes" of people of various ethnic backgrounds
- B. Others

Elicit from the class an explanation of these lines. Ask the learners to write in their own words the moral of the poem. As a follow-up, have the learners write slogans or design posters to express the idea that prejudging with limited facts leads to distortion. The learners may wish to illustrate their concept of each of the blind man's impression of the elephant's appearance. Compare the drawings with a picture of an actual elephant. Ask the learners to respond to these questions: Have you had an experience in which you prejudged someone without having all the facts about the situation? If so, share this experience with the class and show how you might have acted differently.

TEACHER:

V.A. Have the learners draw a picture of people from any one of these categories:

1. American Indians
2. Black Americans
3. Farmers
4. Chinese Americans
5. Scientists
6. Puerto Ricans
7. Bankers or businessmen
8. Movie stars
9. Policemen

The pictures need not be elaborate; however, use crayons, paint, or colored pencils. Color the drawings and post them on the bulletin board in the appropriate categories. Then discuss the drawing from the point of view of deciding if the learner represented all the races as stereotypes. Ask the learners these questions:

CONTENT

Every person is prejudiced in some way.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

"Did anyone draw a scientist as a black, an Indian, or a Chinese American? Did anyone draw an Indian as a farmer? Or a policeman as an Indian? How were the Chinese Americans depicted?"

Point out the stereotypes. Try to elicit a definition of a stereotype from the learners. Ask questions to determine how the children formed the impressions of the people they drew. At another time, the learners may draw college students, mothers-in-law, stepmothers, or communists. Ask, "Are there stereotypes? How did you form your ideas about these groups of people? How might Europeans stereotype Americans?"

LEVEL II -- THEME III: BARRIERS TO EQUALITY: PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION

Instructional Objective 2: Given a variety of experiences, the learner will be able to explain ways in which prejudice exists and impairs relations among groups of people.

CONTENT

Attitudes of prejudice impair relations between groups of people.

- I. How prejudice exists between groups

A. Black and white

B. Rural and urban

C. Suburban and urban

D. Young and old

E. Rich and poor

F. Other

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

I, A, B, C, D, E. See if you can detect the prejudice shown in the following conversations. Below each conversation, write the group of people against whom the speaker seems to be prejudiced.

1. "Why bother to ask the boss to change my vacation. He'll just turn me down. Those guys in the front office think they're so much."

Answer: bosses

2. "He seems like a nice fellow, and his business school recommends him highly, but with the crippled leg....!"

Answer: cripples (handicapped people)

3. "Did you hear that the filling station was robbed again? I'll bet it was those foreigners who've just moved into the neighborhood."

Answer: foreigners

4. "He's a brilliant guy. Probably the most intelligent person I know. But he's an east-sider, and the only good east-sider is one who leaves west-siders alone."

Answer: east-siders

(These sentences may be read to the class to elicit oral responses and discussion.)

TEACHER:

I, A.C. Show pictures of a house, a lovely Better Homes and Gardens type with elegant decor and spacious grounds. Ask the learners to speculate about the people who live there and the reasons why they chose this particular house. Include pictures of the inside of the house in order to give visible clues concerning the occupants, their children, and their hobbies. Show pictures of another less affluent house. Also, include interior scenes. Have the learners write or speculate orally about who might live in this house. Compare this set of responses with the first set of responses. Have the learners explain their answers concerning why they think certain people live in these specific kinds of houses. Watch for voluntary statements concerning the race and occupations of the possible occupants. After the discussion, compare the replies and ask the learners to give reasons for their responses.

TEACHER:

I, D. Show pictures of two different houses, one a large single house, and the other a multiple dwelling. Have the learners contrast the types of houses and speculate about the neighborhoods in which they might find such houses. Discuss the various racial groups, occupational groups, types of furnishings, cars, and religious practices that might be found in the two neighborhoods. Have the learners characterize the imaginary neighborhoods as being like or unlike the one in which they would want to live. Ask the learners to list some of the problems that a citizen of each neighborhood might face. Have them offer solutions to those problems. Have the learners compare their own neighborhoods with the imagined ones, and find the similarities and differences. Ask, "Do any problems of prejudice exist in your own neighborhoods? What can each person do to help dispel prejudice where it exists?"

TEACHER:

I, E. Give each learner a list of the children in the class. Group the learners into groups according to boys and girls. Have each group assign routine classroom tasks; e.g., board washing, audiovisual aides, eraser cleaning, closing windows, messenger, to appropriate class members. Have each group report the assignments to the class. Compare the assignments; cite instances of group prejudice if the housekeeping tasks are assigned to girls and the equipment responsibilities to the boys.

1. Leather jacket
2. Two tickets to the opera
3. A Sears Craftsman bench saw
4. A year's subscription to Popular Mechanics
5. An AM-FM radio and tape deck
6. A 10 speed bike

- A. If you could have your choice of any of these six items, which would you choose?
- B. If your grandmother had her choice, which would she choose?
- C. Which gift do you think your principal would choose?
- D. Which gift would your teacher choose?

After you have recorded your answers, ask your grandmother, your principal, your teacher, and your brother or sister the same question. Then compare their answers with yours. Did you guess their choice correctly? Did you show prejudice by presuming that older people would not want a subscription to Popular Mechanics? Were any of your guesses wrong? Any right? Did any answers support you? If so, explain how.

TEACHER:
I, II. Place the following list of occupations on the board:

Nurse
Electrician
Librarian
Carpenter
Clergyman
Truck driver

If you had to choose one of the six occupations listed, which one would you select? Have each learner make a decision and write his name under the listed occupation of his choice. Ask each learner why he or she chose a particular occupation. If a prejudice is revealed in that response, list it on the chalk board. Make notations about any comments or reactions while the learners are indicating their choices. Finally, lead the learners to conclude that a prejudice which is accepted by many can become almost unnoticed except by those who suffer as a result.

TEACHER:

II. Have the learners select two books that they would like to read from the following list. Discuss the choices. Why did you select your books? What kind of book do you think you have chosen? Did all the boys select "boy" stories? Did all the girls select "girl" stories? Who chose the sports stories? Who chose the mysteries? Why?

TEACHER:

I. Have the learners study colonization, using various social studies texts for references. Ask the learners to describe how the European colonists felt about the land when they came to this country.

Ask the following questions:

1. Did the colonists feel justified in staking out claims in the new land?
2. Did they feel that the Indians were the true owners of the land?
3. What did the colonists think about Indians?
4. Did they know anything about the art, religion, language, or customs of the Indians?
5. Did they regard the Indians as equal to themselves?
6. If the colonists had sailed from England to the shores of Spain or France, would they have staked out a claim to the land and settled down to farming? Give reasons to support your answer.
7. What made it easy for the colonists to settle on Indian lands?

8. Did the colonists regard Indians as the proprietors of the New World or as savages? Explain your answer.
Help the learners make the connection between the colonists' view of the Indians and their treatment of Indian property. What conclusions can you draw? Cite the facts upon which you base your conclusions.

1. Have the learners form two groups, one to be the Indian council and the other to be the colonists' town meeting. Discuss and list the feelings, attitudes, and proposed behavior concerning the settlement of new lands. What action would you propose to change the situation? Give reasons to support your decision.

TEACHER:

I, B. Read aloud these rules taken from a woman teacher's contract in California in 1915. Point out how these rules are discriminatory. Ask, "Does any discrimination against women exist today?"

The teachers promised:

1. Not to get married.
2. Not to keep company with men.
3. To be home between the hours of 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless in attendance at a school function.
4. Not to loiter downtown in ice cream stores.
5. Not to leave town at any time without permission of the school board.
6. Not to smoke cigarettes.
7. Not to get in a carriage or automobile with any man, except father or brother.
8. Not to dress in bright colors.
9. Not to dye her hair.

11. To wear at least two petticoats.
12. To keep the school room neat and clean
  - a. Sweep the floor at least once daily
  - b. Scrub the floor at least once weekly with hot water and soap.

II. Make a bulletin board showing scenes of slavery. Include such scenes as cabin life; punishments; sales of slaves; working in the fields; escaping; singing spirituals which were really codes; working in the "big house," and arriving in the United States in a slave ship.

II. Dramatize a conversation between a slave owner, an overseer, and the sheriff regarding the possibility of recapturing a run-away slave.

II, A, B, C. Investigate the life of a black slave in America. The slave was basically dehumanized, having no rights or privileges. He was considered property and these injustices were protected by the Constitution of the United States. Have the learners discuss their findings and help them to realize that slaves were intentionally dehumanized to justify and perpetuate a system of free human labor.

Possible findings:

- Slaves were prohibited to learn to read or write.
- Slaves could not assemble in groups.
- Slaves had no legal rights.
- Slaves were often prosecuted for crimes they never committed.
- Slaves could not be allowed to make decisions on their own.
- Slave families were deliberately and callously broken up without hope of being reunited.

CONTENT

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

- Slaves were considered animals; chattel.
- Slaves were owned as the property of another person.
- Slaves were considered dumb with no intellectual ability.

MATERIALS/RESOURCES

TEACHER:

II, A. Divide the learners into three groups; give them different colored tags or armbands to wear. Call each group by a distinctive but nonsensical name; e.g., Flonks, Slubs, and Moops. When any person talks to someone else, he must call the person by the appropriate name denoting inferiority.

Play games and have the groups compete for a short period in math, spelling, and playground games.

Do not inform the learners why you are naming them or grouping them. After the period, discuss how they feel about being called names and being grouped with others of the same name. Ask the learners, "Did you dislike the names at first? How did you feel later? How did you feel about the people who called you by your group name? How do you feel about always being grouped with others of the same name who may or may not be your friends? Can you relate this name grouping to real life?"

Discuss the situation thoroughly. What group feelings developed?

TEACHER:

II. Instruct a few learners to leave the room, and have the rest of the learners establish a new society which will have certain rituals or rules unknown to those who are out of the room. For example, in the new society yes might mean no and hot might mean cold. Then make rules such as boys never speak to girls, but girls may speak to boys.

When the immigrants return to the room, they must try to fit in with the new society and try to guess the rules. The members of the new society must give behavior clues concerning what is acceptable.

After the game has been played for awhile, have the learners discuss it and explain how they felt while trying to learn the new rules and to fit into the new society. Others could explain how they regarded those who tried to fit into the group.

TEACHER:
II, C. Duplicate and distribute the following poems:

1. "Incident" - Countee Cullen

Once riding in old Baltimore,
Heart filled, head filled with glee,
I saw a Baltimorean keep looking
Straight at me.

Now I was eight and very small;
And he was no whit bigger,
And so I smiled, but he poked out
His tongue and called me "Nigger."

I saw the whole of Baltimore
From May until December,
Of all the things that happened there
That's all that I remember.

(From On These I Stand)

Discuss the poem by asking these questions:

1. Why did the poet remember only that one incident?
2. How do you think the poet felt when he spoke to the boy?
3. How do you think the poet felt after the boy's reply?

Discuss the poem by asking these questions:

1. What is it that the poet knew?
2. Why would a word like liberty almost make the poet cry?
3. Who are some refugees in America about whom the poet may be speaking?

Prejudice is a learned response.

TEACHER:

I. Read this story aloud to the class.

The MacDonalds, a white family, and the Abernathys, a black family, are neighbors and they are very friendly. The MacDonalds have a darling blue-eyed baby girl. The Abernathys have a darling little girl, too. One day, when they are returning from a picnic at Sandy Point Park, Mr. MacDonald's car is struck by a huge truck. It is a terrible accident. The Abernathys stop their car and run over to the crash. Everybody seems to be dead. Suddenly, Mrs. Abernathy hears a tiny cry coming from somewhere in the bent and twisted auto. Only one tiny person, Linda Sue MacDonald, is still alive! Poor baby Linda Sue has no relatives to care for her. Mr. and Mrs. Abernathy love her dearly, adopt her, and raise her as their very own.

Then ask the learners to respond to these questions:

1. When Linda Sue grows up, what might her appearance be like? Will she still have blue eyes?
2. Do you think she might look like her adoptive Mommy and Daddy? Why not?
3. Do you think Linda Sue might prefer Soul Music to Country and Western music? Why?
4. Do you think Linda Sue might feel more at home with black people than with white people? Why?
5. Do you think Linda Sue might be prejudiced against some of the things that white people say or do? Since she's white, how did she become that way?

(Use this discussion to reinforce the idea that prejudices are learned.)

Prejudice is a learned response.

TEACHER:

I, A, B, C. After a discussion of prejudice that might include viewing the filmstrips "Black Rabbits and White Rabbits," have the learners discuss the following questions:

1. Name something against which you are prejudiced and something for which you are prejudiced.
2. How could you help a friend overcome your prejudice?
3. Do you think prejudice is always good or always bad? Explain your opinion.

TEACHER:

I, II, A, B. Have each learner write one thought, feeling, or idea about another race. Fold, collect, and redistribute the papers at random. Have each learner open and read orally the statement written on the paper. The learner may defend the statement as if he wrote it, or he may refute it. Follow up with a class discussion.

TEACHER:

I, II, A, B. Have the learners listen to the record, "The Boy With The Green Hair." This record describes the prejudice, stereotyping, and discrimination which a new boy in school faces because he has a physical uniqueness - he has green hair. He is ostracized by his classmates because he is different from them. His feelings about the matter, as well as his feelings of his classmates, are expressed. The teacher could use this story as an analogy to the black/white problems of prejudice, or he could instruct the class to substitute black skin for green hair and thus deal more directly with the question of race.

Prejudice is a learned response.

TEACHER:
I. Use the song, "You've Got To Be Carefully Taught" from Rogers and Hammerstein's musical, South Pacific, to help each learner understand that prejudice is learned. Distribute a copy of the song to each learner. Play a recording of the song. (Use a piano, if available.) Have the learners sing the song. Be sure to discuss the content of the song with the class. Have the learners dramatize the song with partners or a small group. Discuss the fact that prejudice is learned, not innate.

"You've Got To Be Carefully Taught" from South Pacific

You've got to be taught to hate and fear,
You've got to be taught from year to year,
It's got to be drummed in your dear little ear-
You've got to be carefully taught!

You've got to be taught to be afraid
Of people whose eyes are oddly made,
And people whose skin is a different shade-
You've got to be carefully taught!

You've got to be taught before it's too late,
Before you are six or seven or eight,
To hate all the people your relatives hate-
You've got to be carefully taught!
You've got to be carefully taught!

LEVEL II -- THEME IV: ACTION FOR EQUALITY: IDEALS AND REALITIES

Instructional Objective 2: Given a definition of constitution, the learner will be able to participate in writing a constitution for the class and to abide by its tenets.

CONTENT	LEARNING ACTIVITIES	MATERIALS/RESOURCES	ASSESSMENT TASK
The right of every person to be treated with justice and respect for his humanity must be recognized and practiced in the classroom.	TEACHER: I. Inform the learners that until this point they may have regarded you as a kind of king of the classroom, much as the colonists regarded the king of England. Continue by asking them if they would like to have a greater share in making the rules and in governing themselves. Relate this activity as much as possible to our country's history. Lead the children to the realization that they will need to write a declaration of independence to you, the teacher, listing reasons why they feel they deserve self-government. (At this time, the teacher may want to introduce a copy of the Declaration of Independence and discuss it briefly.) Upon declaring themselves independent, the learners are ready to write a constitution which includes a bill of rights. Prepare the constitution and declaration for display in the room during the remainder of the year. As situations arise where additions or corrections are needed, the concept of amendments should be taught and amendments should be added.	Forster, Genevieve. 1776, Year of Independence. Have each learner demonstrate that he participated in writing the class constitution by writing his contributions on a paper. Make sure that the learners understand that they may have contributed the germ of an idea, but that it may not appear in the constitution in their exact words.  II. Design a constitutional check list based on the rules incorporated into the class constitution to determine whether or not each learner abides by the tenets of the class constitution. Whenever a learner violates a rule, place an appropriate mark beside that rule on his individual check list. Have these individual check lists available for the learners to use in monitoring their own behavior.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Develop the understanding that a constitution defines the powers of a government, states its parts, and specifies the work of each part. Assign the learners into groups of four or six to discuss and formulate some permanent rules for the class. Keep the rules simple. When each group is ready to report, discuss the common rules which the learners feel are necessary and list them on the chalkboard. The next day, after further discussion, if no one mentions the possibility of class officers, the teacher may suggest the idea. Have small groups write the duties of each officer; discuss the results of the group work and formulate a composite list of duties for each officer.

I, II. Study the Preamble to the Constitution and relate its purpose to realities. Have the learners isolate key terms mentioned in the Preamble (union, justice, tranquility, common defense, general welfare, liberty). Discuss these terms which explain the purpose of the Constitution. Discuss these terms in relation to such current national problems as the following:

1. Minority rights
  2. Housing
  3. Equal justice under the law.
- The learners might compose a letter to their Congressman asking him what actions he is taking to further the constitutional ideals of his Constituents.

TEACHER:

III, A. Have the learners study the Bill of Rights and list the provisions of the document. Have each learner relate these rights to the position of minority groups in housing, education, and economics.

Have each learner try to write an Emancipation Proclamation of his own, freeing himself from any situation which he feels may be oppressing him. Have each learner discuss the effect of his proclamation on his life and on the lives of people around him. Elicit comments relating to a better understanding of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

II. Read this story to the learners and have them write or tell an ending to the story:

The children in Mrs. Powell's class were starting to get angry. They couldn't understand why she would ask them so many questions when they only wanted to go to the lavatory. After all, they were in the fifth grade now, and they should be trusted to go down the hall and use the lavatory. The other fifth grade teacher seemed to understand this. Everybody wanted to be in his class. But Mrs. Powell would only say that she had to know where everyone was all the time, that she couldn't trust children, and that she couldn't give them that much freedom.

The children wanted to convince Mrs. Powell that they were ready to be treated with respect and trust. They knew they could handle freedom! John suggested that they go to the principal to ask for a transfer to Mr. Smith's class, but Judy said she didn't think that was such a good idea. What should the children do?

Assign small groups to be responsible for finding and cutting out pictures from magazines that depict the following features of their community: (1) houses, (2) parks-recreation, (3) shops, (4) education, (5) employment, (6) entertainment, (7) other features that the learners might have mentioned. Mount these pictures on a large bulletin board that shows the grid pattern of streets, parks, and lots. Entitle this bulletin board, "Our Ideal Community."

The entire board can be entitled, "The History of Our Pledge to the Flag." An additional contribution to the board: Have the children research and draw flags of the United States showing the number and placement of stars appropriate to the date of each new version of the pledge.		Have each learner apply the concepts of participatory democracy through planning and executing an election of class officers. Assign each learner to a committee to formulate standards for each office during the campaign preceding the election. Nominate the candidates with petitions, brief nominating speeches, seconding speeches, acceptance or declining speeches. Allow the campaign to extend for at least a week. Make sure that each learner participates. Encourage the creation of campaign slogans, posters, buttons, and signs. Have each candidate head a committee to write a platform. Using construction paper, have the learners cut out the Liberty Bell shapes and print the sentence about liberty on them. The Liberty Bell cutouts may be worn as decoration, displayed on a bulletin board, or hung on a classroom Liberty Tree.

TEACHER:

II. Have the learners review the concept of the word quota. How have quotas been used in the past? (Immigration, jobs, admission to school.) What is one present-day concept for the use of quotas? The ideals of democracy include the solution to intergroup problems and allow a constructive change.

7. Write a newspaper informing the school about a problem; present it over the speaker system to your class or the entire school.

9. Present a program to the P.T.A. or other school organization that influences the members in the solution of a problem.

TEACHER:

I, II, III. Write these two situations on the board:

Case A: Mr. Jones likes best to travel by car and Mrs. Jones likes to travel by airplane. On their vacation they took a train.

Case B: Mr. Smith likes ball games, such as basketball. Mrs. Smith likes individual rather than team sports. Both of them learned to play tennis.

Have the learners speculate about each problem, the possible solutions, and the solution offered. Introduce the word compromise, and have the learners arrive at a suitable definition. How are the results in the two cases alike? How are the results in the two cases different? Which compromise do you think would last longer? On what does the success of compromise really depend?

Some of the supportive learning activities described in level II are similar to those in level I; others are usable primarily with upper elementary classes. All of these activities have been carefully selected and described by elementary school teachers who have used them.

These activities can serve as a supplement to those in the units preceding this section. Teachers are encouraged to use these activities in units or separately, according to their appropriateness. Some activities in this section can be substituted for other activities in the preceding units.

The teacher of the upper elementary grades is encouraged to look also at the level III activities, for some of those might be effectively used at the upper elementary level.

It is hoped that teachers will vary the activities as needed for their classes. A check list of the titles of the activities is provided so that the teacher may check them as he uses them. Brief comments about the success of the activity and suggestions for improvements, deletions, and additions will help in the further refinement of this guide to intergroup education.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

1. MY STREET

To develop a feeling of personal worth and satisfaction and to appreciate the different kinds of environments in which people live

Have the children write, illustrate, and bind a book of the chants they use in their neighborhood games. Present the book to a class of younger children and teach them one of the games and its chant.

2. SELF-PORTRAIT IN WORDS - CINQUAIN POEM

To develop a positive self-image

Children write poems about themselves using cinquain form.

2 syllables      4 syllables
4 syllables      2 syllables
6 syllables

Suggest that they use various parts of speech in the following ways:

2 syllables - your first name or ME
4 syllables - adjective
6 syllables - phrase
4 syllables - verb forms
2 syllables - full name (may be more than two syllables)

Examples:

"ME"	or	"ME"
Me, Sue		Me, Tom
Happy, Noisy		Big and noisy
New to this school		Wishing school was today		over
Hoping for friends...		Playing baseball
Sue Rollins		Tom Jones

3. WORDS FROM EVERYWHERE

To recognize the multi-ethnic influence on words in the English language

Have the children identify the nationalities represented in the class. Identify those children who can speak another language. List foreign words which the children know. List some words which are familiar to the children and have them discuss the possible origins of the words. Have the children place cards with foreign words on a map to show the countries from which they originated. The dictionary may be helpful (continued)

4. DIARY

To become aware of the sensitivities of people who represent different ethnic groups

5. IT HAPPENED TO ME

To share knowledge about persons of various ethnic groups who have contributed to the development of the United States in locating the word origins. Examples:

Foreign		English
Stoep	- (Dutch) step	Stoop	- common name for front step in New York City
Apasum	- (Algonquin Indian)	Opposum	- a marsupial common to the United States
Bobushka	- a white animal (Russian) "little grandma"	Bobushka	- kerchief for head

Have each child in a group keep a diary as if he were with:

Harriet Tubman on the Underground Railroad
Crazy Horse at the Battle of Little Bighorn

John F. Kennedy on the PT 109

Levi Strauss at the Gold Rush

Christopher Columbus on his first voyage

Martin Luther King and the Montgomery bus boycott

Julian Bond and the Freedom Riders in Mississippi

Each child needs to locate information on his subjects.

Emphasize the idea that a day-to-day account is central to diary keeping.

Have the class prepare "Who Am I" sentences. This may be a written or oral activity. Examples:

"Because I was tired, I refused to give up my seat in the front of the bus to move to the back. As a result, there was a boycott."

Answer - Rosa Parks

"I designed the city of Washington, but then I became angry and returned to France."

Answer - Le 'Enfant

"If it weren't for me, the White House wouldn't be located at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue."

Answer - Benjamin Banneker

"I used tent canvas to make trousers."

Answer - Levi Strauss

6. THE FIRST AMERICANS

To understand the culture of the Indians of Maryland and its influence on today's society

Locate and compile information about the customs of Maryland Indian tribes, e.g., Woodland Indians, Nanticokes, Yaocomincass, Pisataways, Patuxents, and Susquehannocks. Make a chart depicting the Indian customs which have been adapted by other Americans. Find out how the Indians preserved their meat. Compare these methods with the modern methods for preserving meat. Find examples of Indian design in modern clothing. Make examples of Indian designs which use vegetable print.

Have children make coil pottery using the following directions:

Make coils by rolling clay on a flat surface. When coil is about twelve inches long, start to form the bottom of a vessel by making concentric coils of clay lying flat. Build up the sides with rows of coils and then smooth the interior and exterior surfaces with wet hands. Allow pots to dry for one week. When the pots are dry, have the children shellac the surface. Children may research authentic Indian designs and decorate the vessels, using tempera paint or they may decorate them with ceramic glaze and fire them in a kiln (it will be difficult to reproduce authentic Indian designs unless the glaze is very thick).

This activity may be combined with a trip to the Smithsonian American Indian exhibit or to other American Indian museums.

7. LET'S EAT

To become acquainted with foods from various ethnic groups

Invite parents to help prepare a tasting party of a variety of ethnic dishes. Encourage the children to sample unfamiliar foods, describe the tastes, and name the ingredients.

Potato Latkes (Jewish Potato Pancakes)

Grate 4 large potatoes (about 3 cups, drained)

4 T. grated onion

2 eggs

1 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. pepper

2 T. cracker meal

1/2 C oil, or butter (continued)

LEARNING ACTIVITIES

Beat eggs, add potatoes, onion, salt, pepper, and cracker meal. Heat fat in frying pan and drop the potato mixture into the fat by the tablespoon. Fry until browned on both sides. Serve hot. Makes 24 pancakes about 2" in diameter. May be served with applesauce.

8. MASKS

To discover the significance of masks from a historical, a religious, or a cultural point of view

Have each child in the group make a life-sized mask which will convey a specific idea or an expression. The mask may be made from heavy paper, grocery bags, papier maché over balloons, papier maché over paper plates, or paper sculpture over cylindrical boxes. Scrap fabric, colored yarns, or sequins may be used for designs. When completed, the masks may be displayed and the children may discuss what each mask represents, and who might wear it.

Note: This activity could be correlated with a trip to the Museum of African Art of the Smithsonian Institute.

9. DANCE WITH ME --
I'LL DANCE WITH YOU

To discover how dance has been used by many ethnic groups as a means of expression

Have the children learn and perform in groups such dances as:
Czech Polka                      Israeli Hora                      Mexican Hat Dance
Greek Line Dance                      Hawaiian Hand Motions

Use recorded authentic native music as accompaniment. Have the children who know dances of other ethnic origins teach them to the class.

10. OPEN SESAME

To dispel prejudice by increasing cross-cultural understanding

Read stories from collections of fairy tales of other cultures. Have the children compare the heroes. Have them make a sound filmstrip about the story or dramatize one of the stories; use music from a particular culture and paint an appropriate backdrop.

11. TO TELL THE TRUTH

To dispel prejudice by distinguishing between authoritative and unreliable sources of information

Have the children investigate organizations that are attempting to protect their members, and organizations that are trying to foster understanding among all people. Have them list the names, methods used, and the reasons for the formation of the groups. Invite speakers from these organizations to explain their work to the children. Examples:

Italian American League

Civil Rights League

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

American Jewish Committee

National Conference of Christians and Jews

Anti-Defamation League

12. DISTEL FINKS AND
HEX SIGNS

To increase cross-cultural understanding through a study of the Pennsylvania Dutch and an appreciation of their influence on American art

Have the children study the historical background of the Pennsylvania Dutch. Make a collection of Pennsylvania Dutch artifacts and note the design themes. Have the children discuss the significance of the hex symbol which is found on many American barns. The children may make their own designs which show Pennsylvania Dutch influences. Reproducing the hex signs may be coordinated with practice in manipulation of a compass.

Note: The teacher may coordinate this activity with the Tasting Party, another activity in this guide.

13. DIFFERENT STROKES
FOR DIFFERENT FOLKS

To recognize that people in various situations or social groups may utilize objects in different ways

Have the children classify a drum according to the ways in which different social groups use it. Show a drum and have the children answer questions such as, "How would you use a drum?" "What would your mother do with a drum?" "How would a musician use a drum?" "How would an African or an Indian use a drum?" They may examine a square of white cloth to see how many different ways they might use it (a bandage, a

14. SIGN UP TO EXPLORE

To know that many ethnic groups participated in the discovery and exploration of the American continent flag). The children may also examine and discuss the use of other objects such as the bow and arrow and a piece of rope.

Have the children study the early explorers to learn their countries or origin, the flag under which they sailed, the area of the continent which they explored and claimed, their relationship with the Indians, their contributions to the development of the United States, and their purpose in sailing to America; the names of any geographic place in Maryland and in the United States which were derived from the language of the early explorers. Have the children accompany an explorer on an imaginary trip. They may trace the route of the voyage on a map and list the supplies and equipment which they would need. The children may write a letter home to the family in which they describe their feelings about the things they saw and heard. They may also draw illustrations of their experiences and discoveries.

15. JAMESTOWN

To discover that the Jamestown Colony included a group of black people from Africa

Have the children read about the Jamestown Colony and see the filmstrip "Minorities That Have Made America Great", Set-1 Negroes, Part 1. Have them build a model of the Jamestown Colony. Discuss the differences between a black and white indentured servant and a slave in the Jamestown Colony. The children may write or tell a short story about their voyage to America in a later period. Note: Teacher references: Quarles, Benjamin: The Negro in the Making of America. Compare the conditions on a voyage of the indentured servants, free colonists, and slaves. The children may speculate about the reasons why white indentured servants could escape their servitude more easily than the black indentured servants.

16. MUSICAL SPICE

To react to the music of various ethnic people by listening, singing, and performing and to recognize the many sources from which musical enrichment may come

Have the children listen to records of short selections of various kinds of music. Examples:

African	Vietnamese	Jewish
Chinese	East Indian	South American

Have the children tell from which ethnic group the music comes and how the music makes them feel. The children may clap or move in spontaneous dance to the rhythm and mood of the (continued) music. They may also use rhythm instruments. Have the children sing along with the voices on the record to capture the mood of the music and to appreciate the techniques involved.

17. YOU FINISH IT

To interpret a situation of social significance and to make a prediction based on a story or picture

Present an unfinished story to the class and have the children finish it. Suitable stories may be found in NEA Journals. Either the children or the teacher may create unfinished stories which relate to relevant ethnic issues.
Reference: NEA Journal - "Unfinished Stories"

Words and Action, Role-Playing, Photo Problems

18. SING WHILE YOU WORK

To recognize the widespread use of music in the work of people who have many different backgrounds

Have the children act out the repetitive movements of groups working together, and sing the songs which have their origins in such activities. Examples:

"Blow the Man Down"

Making Music Your Own - Book 5

Railroad song - (driving spikes, laying ties)

"Drill Ye Tarrriers"

Making Music Your Own - Book 5

African work song

"Johnny Bones"

Making Music Your Own - Book 4

Rowing song

"Volga Boatman"

19. HEAR US

To understand that dialects reflect differences in vocabulary, pronunciation, and grammar, and to understand the artistic richness which dialects give to our language

Have the children find books in the library which are written in dialects. A class dictionary of interesting words may be started through the use of this activity and may be enlarged as children discover other words.

Have the children talk with their families and neighbors to gather information and examples of dialects. If possible, tapes may be made and brought to the class.

TITLE	PURPOSE	LEARNING ACTIVITIES
20. PIONEER HERITAGE	To discover that the pioneer heritage of our country includes founders with various ethnic backgrounds	Have a group of children compose and send a letter to the Baltimore Sun asking for a copy of John Goodspeed's Lexicon of Baltimore . A discussion of this may lead to an understanding that each person has a dialect. This idea may be further extended by having the children make individual tapes and then play them for each other.
21. "MOSAIC" TIME LINE	To recognize that the United States is a "cultural mosaic" rather than a "melting pot"	Develop a time-line showing noteworthy events or outstanding contributions of minority groups. A specific time period may be used. Discuss the implications of the time line in a pluralistic society.
22. PEN PALS	To dispel prejudice through interaction with children of other geographical locations	Correspond with other schools in another part of the neighborhood, state, country, or world. This can be done arbitrarily by making a "game" out of the selection. Control the choice by your selection of the map - community, world map. Follow the format of the game "Pin the Tail on the Donkey" and have a child select a place on the map. Send the letters in one packet addressed to a school and direct attention to a particular grade level. Example: Grade School Attention Grade 5 City, State, Zip Code
23. I HEAR AMERICA SINGING	To develop an understanding of the interdependence of the many different kinds of people who make up our nation	Have the children read "I Hear America Singing" by Walt Whitman. Then identify each workman mentioned in the poem. Have the children discuss how each workman was important to the other people mentioned in the poem. The children may illustrate the poem, use the poem for choral speaking, and pantomime the actions.
